NEW YORK: E. P. DUTTON AND CO.

EDITORIAL OFFICES: 67, DALE STREET, LIVERPOOL.

An Information Bureau . .

is attached to the organisation of the LITERARY YEAR BOOK for supplying to all the users of the Book any kind of information desired. If the service required is merely to supply names and addresses, sources of supply, or perform some courtesy for a writer, no charge is made; if the information needed is such that an enquirer will receive remuneration himself a moderate fee will be charged to cover expenses; advice to literary aspirants will be given but nothing in connection with the ordinary functions of a literary agent or other author's assistant will be undertaken. The Bureau is intended to deal with questions in an advisory capacity than otherwise. Legal advice will not be given under any circumstances, but reference to a good solicitor will be given.

All communications should be addressed to the EDITOR OF THE LITERARY YEAR BOOK, 67, DALE ST., LIVERPOOL, marked in the lefthand corner "Information Bureau," and be accompanied by a stamped addressed envelope.

Authors and others are specially invited to make use of this Service of Information on all matters and our phases of literary, press and journalistic and artistic work, which are of interest for Writers and Readers.

INTRODUCTION

Somewhat contrary to the usual procedure this Introduction to the 1921 Edition of the LITERARY YEAR BOOK has been written when all the work was completed. Handicapped somewhat by the lack of time for very careful corrections there are a number of clerical and printers' errors in the Book, which a careful reader will easily distinguish and read correctly. They are unfortunately inseparable from rush-work, and acknowledgments must be given to the printers and binders for their very helpful assistance.

An endeavour has been made in the present volume to shed the "halo" of distinguished letters and to produce a book which will be really helpful in the common task of the work-a-day world of the writer. One's first attempt at such a task can scarcely be successful, but if in a small measure the present edition is of some service to its users the Editor will feel repaid for the work involved. It has been a labour which has given him extreme pleasure, but it is his wish to be of still further service right throughout 1921 to the readers of the Book, and any questions or letters addressed to him will always have careful attention.

In the interests of the authors themselves, particular attention is directed to the section on Literary Property (p. 409), and the importance of observing the suggestions laid down there cannot be over-emphasised. In the main the reader will find that there is more matter of use to him in this than in previous volumes, and with an earlier preparation of the 1922 edition than was possible with this one, it is hoped that the scope of the Book will be considerably extended. Suggestions will receive careful consideration.

It is gratifying to note in to-day's New Year's Honours the names of Mr. T. J. Bennett, C.I.E., M.P., for many years Editor of the Times of India, Mr. William Davies, Editor of the Western Mail, Mr. Dawson Williams, M.D., F.R.C.P., Editor of the British Medical Journal, Mr. Samuel Squire Spriggs, M.D., M.R.C.S., Editor of the Lancet, and Mr. Wm. Denham, author and writer. One would like to see an increasing recognition by the State of men of letters and journalists, with a decreasing reward for mere political ends. The best achievements of humanity are fostered more by real literature and clean press work than by politics, and until the happy time of recognition arrives the lot of the writer and artist will remain difficult.

The years since the Armistice have not brought about the millenium we were promised, and the literary profession—in its all embracing wideness—seems to be the last to recover from the effects of the war. The outlook for this year is distinctly brighter, and whilst no doubt difficulties, originating in outside spheres of influence will be reflected on the world of book-makers, there is still the consolation that Editors still purchase authors' wares, and that brains will find some means of keeping the Cheques flowing into one's personal Exchequer. The dawn of 1921 certainly seems to hold out the prospect of a more stable world, and the dominating influence of the monopoly paper-makers is being gradually dissolved. Prices are returning more to their normal level, and the gradual appearance of new journals catering for wide and diverse interests show an easing of the situation. Finances on the other hand are at a somewhat low ebb, and with banks refusing to help legitimate business, some little time must still elapse before anything like a return to pre-war activity is reached. Still there are odd lots of cheap paper to be obtained, and the advent of German and Belgian papers during the last two months at prices below the cost of production in British mills will cause home prices to drop to the very lowest level that is possible. In buying paper, or any other commodity, the exercise of brains will undoubtedly help, as also an exhaustive inquiry in all paper markets. The big users of paper make their contracts well ahead, and experienced folk in this trade give one consolation "that paper won't become much dearer. A cheaper market is the more likely."

On the other hand, costs of book production are likely to remain high, and consequently with increased retail prices sales, with the exception of very popular books, are still likely to remain restricted. Therefore the writer's ambition should be to create a very popular book. Daring Memoirs and a great history are the outstanding books of 1920. Mrs. Asquith's Autobiography, and Colonel Repington's Memoirs stand out above all other books. They are sensational, and therefore popular. The concluding volumes of the Life of Benjamin Disraeli, Earl of Beaconsfield, by Mr. George Earle Buckle, aroused much interest on account of the revelation of Disraeli's senile passion for the two mature sisters, Lady Chesterfield and Lady Bradford. The most distinguished autobiography of the year was undoubtedly W. N. P. Barbellion's A Last Diary, the bravest dying man in all literary history.

Beyond these the judgment of Mr. Louis J. McQuilland is entirely sound in his selection of notable books of 1920. Writing in the Daily Express he says:—

Mr. Joseph Conrad's "The Rescue" has the old brooding beauty of this man of genius with the Slav brain and the English pen; and Mr. John Galsworthy has regained the power of his middle years in "Fraternity," the splendid full-length successor to "The Man of Property." Mr. Joseph Hergesheimer came to magnificent failure in "Lina Condon," and won to safety again in his collection of short stories, "The Happy End." D. H. Lawrence's "The Lost Girl" has many fierce moments. Mr. Stephen McKenna has been too hectic with "Lady Lilith." Mr. Compton Mackenzie's "Vanity Girl" reeked of cheap snobbery. "The Captives," by Mr. Hugh Walpole, was morbidly dull.

Leading women novelists have been inactive. Miss May Sinclair's "The Romantic" suffers from the same perverse faults as "Mary Olivier." Miss Clemence Dane has, perhaps wisely, refrained from writing a successor to her triumphant "Legend." Miss Katharine Mansfield's "Bliss" has aroused cultured enthusiasm. Mrs. Mary Webb's "The House in Dormer Forest" is her best achievement; and Miss Elinor Mordaunt has sustained her well-earned reputation with "The Little Soul." I think if a plebiscite of readers were taken they would give the laurel crown of victory to Miss Sheila Kaye-Smith's "Green Apple Harvest," which has all the virility and freshness of "Sussex Gorse," if not the same white-heat of passionate endeavour.

This good novel would be run close by "In the Mountains," written by some anonymous lady who must have lived with the famous Elizabeth in her German garden.

Among the younger writers Mr. F. Brett Young has created a little miracle of pity and beauty in "The Tragic Bride"; this is real literature. A book of extraordinary open-air vigour was "Eli of the Downs," by C. M. A. Peake. Good Irish novels are scarce, but Conal O'Riordan's "Adam of Dublin" and Mrs. Victor Rickard's "A Puritan's Progress" have originality and distinction.

The critics are still awaiting with avid curiosity Miss Rebecca West's lingering novel "The Judge."

Feminist books of the year which have aroused fierce disputations are "Our Women," by Arnold Bennett, and "The Good Englishwoman," by Orlo Williams.

Mr. H. G. Wells' "Outline of History" has proven an immense success, and is the favoured gift book of thinking people. No one has ever humanised history as "H.G." has done. A woman friend describes his "Outline" as more informative than Plutarch and more exciting than the best detective story.

Max Beerbohm's "And Even Now" is already as established a classic as "The Works of Max Beerbohm," "More," and "Seven Men."

Owing to pressure of space it has been impossible to include in the current issue a Diary. It is hoped that this will be rectified next year, as a diary is always useful to a writer and author. It is as indispensable as his "Whitaker," which for the current year is particularly complete. To many writers the yearly replenishing of their shelves with Year Books is an expensive item—and particularly so within the last year or so—but it is none the less necessary. For cheapness the "Daily Mail Year Book," "Whitaker's Almanac," and the "British Dominions Year Book" supply some very valuable information at a small cost. "Who's Who"—that excellent work of Messrs. A. & C. Black—is well worth its cost for biographical details and for quick reference. It can be found at all libraries. A Press Directory completes the reference shelf quite well.

An increasing attention to Labour in its many phases might well repay careful study by authors and writers, and for fiction there is here a large unexplored field. Perhaps in 1921 we shall see a real Labour novel.

With these few thoughts on the Year Book when completed one must close. The aim and object throughout has been to render service to the embryo, as well as the distinguished writer. With its faults, perhaps the user will be generous; with its usefulness; with its embodiment of the idea of service perhaps the user will also be generous, and tell others who would find the book useful. In any event, it is hoped that the correspondence from readers during this year will make the 1922 edition more perfect still.

Some Typewriter Tips.

It is not only the stenographer who to-day uses a typewriter, but many a journalist, novelist, and other professional women type out their own effusions, and there are some girls who prefer the typewriter to the pen and use one for their own private correspondence. Therefore the following hints may be useful on the care and upkeep of a machine, especially to those who have taught themselves to type-write.

A Good Plan.

The machine should be cleaned at least twice a week with a long brush to remove the dust from the inside works, and a stiff small brush resembling a toothbrush for the keys. It is a good plan to brush the keys first over lightly with oil, as this removes all the dirt from the keys and saves the necessity of picking out each letter with a pin, which otherwise is necessary, as the letters become clogged with dirt. Every two months the machine should be oiled.

If a plain piece of paper be placed behind the sheet that is to be used it will prevent a dirty smudge appearing on the roller should a mistake occur that has to be erased.

Sometimes in erasing a mistake the rubber will take out more than the necessary letters : to prevent this happening place a small piece of paper over the rest of the line or word. It may be necessary that the line above or below will have to be covered.

When several carbon papers are used it is a good idea to place each carbon about an inch above the paper, so that when the page is finished all the carbons can be pulled out together by their ends, which will show an inch below the sheets of paper. Or it may happen that a sheet of paper and its carbon copy have had to be taken out of the machine it is quite simple to replace them. The carbon should be so placed that at least three lines of writing are visible on the paper ; then hold the sheet up to the light and see that each word is directly over its carbon and carefully place both sheets in the machine. They may have to be adjusted again slightly.

When erasing a mistake and a carbon is used, always place a piece of paper between the carbon and the sheet below, otherwise the carbon will smudge.

The Little Finger.

It is best to use the little finger when striking the full stop and comma, as this finger does not possess the power of the others and consequently will not hit so hard. Thus the stop will not go through the paper.

And, above all, always cover the machine at night, otherwise the dust will enter the works and do a great amount of damage.

To Authors and Journalists.

WE offer you every possible assistance in your work.

YOUR MSS. can be criticised by a first-rate litterateur and publishers' reader with a life-long experience. Valuable improvements will be suggested when possible, thorough and skilful revisions will be made, and advice given as to the best market for your work.

IF you are already a well-known writer, you can be saved much time and nerve strain by having your rough MSS. carefully touched up and prepared for the typist.

IT is so vitally important now-a-days that your MSS. novel or short story should be the right length. We take this worry off your shoulders.

FILM Scenarios fetch good prices. If your work is dramatic, why not let us arrange it for the SCREEN?

IF you are a specialist, your scientific work can have just those skilful touches added that will make it more acceptable to the general public.

IF you are a beginner, you can have a course of postal tuition on practical and original lines. Your efforts will have personal and sympathetic assistance.

WE place MSS. for clients and carefully study the best markets; our terms are reasonable.

YOU can depend on receiving carefully checked typewritten copy for the editor or publisher. Literary work should always be typed by those who make a speciality of it.

PRINTING in tasteful and refined style at the most moderate rates.

TRANSLATIONS in several languages.

AUTHORS' STATIONERY and GOOD TYPE-WRITERS supplied on favourable terms.

CAMBRIDGE LITERARY AGENCY, 8, Henrietta Street, London. W.C. (late of 115 Strand). Managing Director—GEORGE G. MAGNUS. Manager—JOHN WHITE. Secretary—E. K. PACZENSKY. Representative in New York—A. W. HERNAN. Business—Placing novels, short stories, articles and poems. Literary matter placed with over 200 publishers and periodicals. Many well-known editors are clients of this firm. Over 1000 unique testimonials received from authors whose work has passed through the Agency. The Agency has placed 29 novels, short stories, and articles in one week. The policy of the C.L.A. is to deal with only suitable matter, and it is forced to refuse considerably over 4000 MSS. annually that do not reach the Agency's standard. This careful selection is the secret of the C.L.A.'s phenomenal success. The obtaining of the best possible terms and the highest prices is the aim of this firm, and it has numerous testimonials in proof of its good offices in this important direction. Furthermore, payment is made on acceptance of work, without further charge, thus saving the author months of waiting for his money. The Agency offers £320 annually in free prizes for its clients, without entrance fee of any kind to encourage Authors to send in their best work. These prizes are paid on the 1st of every month; the winners on the same day receiving valuable publicity in the Daily Mail. Established 20 years, and known as the "Straight Agency." Telephone—1648 Gerrard. (See advertisement, p. 26).

CHARING CROSS AGENCY (Proprietors—O. F. DAVIES, Ltd.). This literary and dramatic agency was established in 1908 as the Empire Literary Agency, and subsequently amalgamated with the Fleet Street Bureau (Est. 1906). LITERARY, JOURNALISITC, AND SECRETARIAL BUREAU, 50, Lincoln's Inn Fields, w.c., under the direction of Miss IRONSIDE. This Bureau, which has a competent staff of readers, including a professional publishers' reader of long experience, invites authors to send MSS. of novels, travel-books, short stories, &c., for placing with Editors and Publishers both in the United Kingdom and America. Where necessary, advice is given and revision undertaken, if desired. Typewriting undertaken. Prospectus on application. (See Advertisement, p. 28).

MASSIE (HUGHES), AND CO., 40, Fleet Street, London, E.C., and New York. Business management for literary and dramatic authors. Book, serial, dramatic, and cinema rights of well-known novels and plays placed in all countries offering a market. This firm, which is conducted under the personal direction of Mr. Hughes Massie, gives special attention to the work of distinguished authors whose standing entitles them to a world-wide market, and also to young authors of promise. To the former are offered exceptional facilities for adequate simultaneous sale of their work in various parts of the world, making the agents' intervention a commercial advantage rather than a charge on the author's income. As Hughes Massie & Co. have no mechanical "offer round" system, the young author, as well as the established writer, has the advantage of that personal attention and advice which is so helpful at the beginning of a literary or dramatic career. References to distinguished English, American, and Continental literary and dramatic authors, whose work the firm are handling, will be sent on application. (See advertisement, p. 20).

Help for Authors.

- Co-operation means a greater output, and at the present time it is absolutely necessary for each individual to double, or treble their output, if at all possible.
- If therefore, an author is left free to produce, and all the business is undertaken by some one who knows all there should be known it is certain his output will be greater, and his returns higher. The result of co-operation.
- Further, proof-reading stops output, so does sending out MSS. and attending to the thousand and one details necessary to deal adequately with the ramifications of a literary man's business. Typing occupies valuable time, and so does the writing of letters. If all this is placed in the hands of a Literary Adviser more time is gained for production.
- For over 15 years all kinds of help has been supplied to Authors; Press-Cuttings, Translation Work, Proof-reading and Typewriting has been undertaken. In fact, everything that really helps. New Authors are helped by honest and frank criticism, and those of established reputation have every possible assistance, and information on all subjects is supplied quickly.

There is no help in literary work which is not undertaken thoroughly well and expeditiously by

WATT, MESSRS. A. P. & SON, Hastings House, Norfolk Street, Strand, W.C. Mr. A. P. Watt, the late senior member of the firm, was the originator of the literary agent. He was the first to conceive and put into practice the idea of the literary agent, acting as an intermediary between authors and publishers and editors. Messrs. A. P. Watt & Son are at all times glad to hear from authors, whether at the beginning of their career or of established reputation, with a view to the disposal of their work. A good idea of the value to authors of Messrs. A. P. Watt & Sons' Literary Agency is given in the following extract from the Autobiography of the late Sir Walter Besant: "Let me here express my great and lasting gratitude to my agents, Mr. A. P. Watt and his son, by whose watch and ward my interests have been so carefully guarded for eighteen years. During that time I have always been engaged for three years in advance; I have been relieved from every kind of pecuniary anxiety; my income has been multiplied by three at least; and I have had, through them, the offer of a great deal more work than I could undertake. I cannot speak too strongly of the services rendered to me by my literary agents. Of course, there are different kinds of agents. There is the agent, for example, who knows nothing about his business. But the agent who does know his business who knows also editors, publishers, and their arrangements, may be of immense use to the novelist, the essayist, the traveller—in short, to the author of any book that can command a circulation and a

is not only a pleasant hobby, but also an admirable means of taking the edge off the increase in the cost of living. It allows a full scope for literary craftsmanship, and provides an excellent training in the use of words, but it also brings a very valuable addition to one's income. It enables a story writer to exercise his skill with the pen within a smaller compass and to use the odd hour of his leisure to his profit, while his more ambitious schemes are maturing.

To-day the newspapers are clamouring for bright suggestive little articles on dinner-table topics, and the writer who does not take advantage of this demand is throwing away the guineas which would do so much to soften the inevitable attack of the Income Tax Collector.

500 Words.

All the popular newspapers are clamouring for 500 word articles on subjects of every day interest—subjects about which we are all talking.

Now the writer who can talk interestingly and vivaciously about such things and who does not write about them is wasting his gifts.

Look at any newspaper and you will see short articles on Inconveniences of Travel, Increase in Fares, Economics in Cooking, Food Production in the Garden, New Ideas for Domestic Decoration and so on—all subjects on which writers are certain to have original views.

If you can talk about these things and if you can write, why not bring your gifts together and write what you now talk?

Good Money for Topical Articles.

This need not interfere with your other literary work. If you aspire to become a literary critic and now write essays for the local Literary Society on Shelley or Hardy or the Modern Poets, you may still do so and yet earn good honest money by writing topical articles. If your forte is story-writing, you may do this occasional newspaper work, without dropping your fiction and the profit will be yours.

It is not as if the preparation of popular articles will be waste of time. The articles must reveal good craftsmanship. They must be clean and firm in outline, crisp in phrasing, and full of life and colour. As such, they provide splendid practice in writing.

It would save you time and postage stamps however to know what the P.C.C. can do for the amateur who is seriously interested in writing for profit.

Criticism and Advice FREE to readers of this Year Book.

It would pay you to submit a short specimen MS. to the Editor-in-Chief of the P.C.C. for the expert criticism and advice that is given freely to those who mean business when they write.

Enclose stamp for return of MS. and address it to The Editor-in-Chief, The Practical Correspondence College, 70, Thanet House, STRAND, W.C. 2. The criticism furnished will help you to know why all your present work is not accepted; it will also show you how to make money by writing newspaper articles.

THE International Press-Cutting Bureau

begs to bring the following facts to the attention of Authors and Publishers.

1.—A Subscription to the I.P.C.B. includes press-cuttings of the following countries:—Great Britain and all Colonies; United States of America; Latin America; Mexico; Argentine, etc.; France; Italy; Spain; Portugal; Belgium; Holland; Scandinavia; Switzerland; Germany; Austria; Czecho-Slovakia; Poland; Roumania; Hungary; Bulgaria; Yougoslavia; Turkey; Greece.

2.—Those who have already subscribed to other Press-Cutting agencies for British Cuttings can subscribe to the International Press-Cutting Bureau for Foreign Cuttings only, at the same subscription rates.

3.—The International Press Cutting Bureau has developed its service to the efficiency and regularity of a daily newspaper, cuttings being dispatched at the very same day when they are published, in the case of London Dailies, Weeklies and Monthlies, and on the day of their reaching London—in the case of out-of-town and overseas papers and magazines.

4.—Every subscriber receives constant and prompt attention throughout the subscription period, which is unlimited.

5.—A special research department has been organised, which should be of great help to our subscribers in finding articles in Magazines and Newspapers of remote dates; also old and new books. There will be no special charge except the cost of postage and the actual price of the Magazine, Newspaper, or Books required.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES.

£1	1	0	...	for 100 Cuttings.
£2	2	0	...	„ 300 „
£3	3	0	...	„ 600 „
£5	5	0	...	„ 1,000 „

Rates subject to Alteration.

Clients requiring an unlimited number of Cuttings should apply for special terms.

Library Service Bureau

67, DALE STREET, LIVERPOOL.

MARJORIE PEACOCK.
DIRECTOR.

AND AT MANCHESTER & LONDON.

The multifarious facilities offered by THE LIBRARY SERVICE BUREAU in matters relating to bibliography and book conservation cover everything pertaining to librarianship.

THE LIBRARY SERVICE BUREAU Repairs, binds, values, selects, purchases, and searches for.....BOOKS; Systematises, classifies, catalogues, inventories and co-ordinates LIBRARIES; Compiles.....BIBLIOGRAPHIES; Undertakes LITERARY RESEARCH; PROOF READING, INDEXING, ETC., ETC., ETC.

EVERYMAN'S LIBRARIAN. There are hundreds of libraries belonging to private persons and attached to schools, clubs, institutions, etc.—libraries which are left to the care of amateur or other librarians whose lack of training and experience or of natural aptitude or the necessary time, renders them unqualified for the work involved, and prevents systematic organisation. THE LIBRARY SERVICE BUREAU EMPLOYS THE SERVICES OF EXPERT LIBRARIANS AND BOOK SPECIALISTS, and can supply temporary librarians on the spot or undertake work from the Bureau Offices. It is, in fact, EVERYMAN'S LIBRARIAN.

A very special feature is the Bureau's MULTIPLE CATALOGUING AND CLASSIFICATION SYSTEM, which is centralised at the Bureau.

Classification is the highroad of a Library; and the catalogue is its key.

It is just here that the amateur so often fails; but by means of our Multiple System, every library may be minutely classified and equipped with a scientifically constructed catalogue, replete with references, cross references and analytical entries. There is no need for a local expert; we deliver the appropriate entries ready for use.

✻ EMPLOY THE LIBRARY SERVICE BUREAU—EVERYMAN'S LIBRARIAN. ✻

WHO'S WHO IN LITERATURE : AUTHORS AND JOURNALISTS

The following Directory is confined, chiefly from space considerations, to British and Colonial writers of standing and repute. A few American authors, publishing in this country are, however, included.

To ensure this volume of the LITERARY YEAR BOOK being as correct and up-to-date as possible, every author, journalist and artist, whose name appeared in the 1920 Edition of the book, was courteously asked to revise his entry as it then appeared. To the many authors who have enabled correct and up-to-date entries to appear in this Year's Edition the Editor tenders his grateful thanks. Entries have been revised to October 30th, 1920.

It is obvious, however, that, through various causes, a number of entries cannot be checked and in spite of every effort to trace some writers the housing problem increases the difficulty in tracing removals, etc. Whenever possible the Editor has exhausted all possible sources of information before passing for press an entry, which is not complete in every respect. In those cases, where the entry sheet sent out has not been returned at the closing date, the Editor has done his utmost to ensure the information being correct and accurate.

Those few entries which it is impossible to check have been marked with a star (*) so that users of the Book will know exactly the information they can rely upon and that which is questionable. If a copy of this Year Book should fall into the hands of any writer or artist, whose name is starred, the Editor would appreciate a note of any inaccuracies and omissions so that they can be rectified in the next Edition, or an intimation that they desire the entry to be deleted. It is hoped in time to secure every entry being absolutely correct.

The ordinary contractions and abbreviations in common use have been used throughout the book. C=contributor in all cases : M=member : † signifies that the name is a pseudonym.

Where no address appears in an entry a letter sent c/o the Publishers will usually be forwarded to a writer.

It will be noticed in the directory of Authors, Journalists and Artists that in some cases no private address is given. In the majority of cases this is withheld at the request of the author, and the Editor concurs in this action.

At the same time authors and others would considerably lessen the work of revising the book if they would in every case supply their full postal address, and intimate to the Editor whether they wish it to appear or not. It is impossible to keep accurate records without full information and the Editor would appeal most strongly to all authors to supply this information. In every case confidence will be respected and it is hoped that authors will respond court-cously to this request. A large number of private addresses are withheld by authors, chiefly on account of the use of the book for charitable and begging purposes. Whilst unable to stop this use of the book the Editor requests that the Book will not be abused in this respect.

Authors and Artists, whose names and details do not appear in the Book are asked to send in an entry in the same form as those appearing in the Directories as early as possible in the year.

The attention of Authors and others is drawn to the Authors' Assistants Section, which is designed to help them as much as possible. All the advertisers' announcements therein are of firms who can be trusted as experienced and capable assistants for all classes of literary and artistic work.

MARK MEREDITH,
Editor.

ARTISTS AND ILLUSTRATORS

NOTE.—The titles following each name are those of the various books illustrated, with the Publisher and—in some cases—year of issue. The Editor will be glad to receive names and particulars for this Directory; and any assistance towards increasing and making it comprehensive will be welcomed. Every endeavour has been made to obtain information at first-hand (and the Editor begs to thank all those who have assisted in this respect), but where no returns have been made, particulars have been gathered from other sources. See also Note on Page 65.

THE DICTIONARY OF NATIONAL BIOGRAPHY.

That the Delegates of the Oxford Clarendon Press recognise the present defects of the D.N.B. is apparent from the letter their Secretary sent to The Times on Nov. 12th, 1920. This letter is a clear exposition of the Delegates work to date and intentions and they intend to prepare a volume covering the years 1912-21. Mr. H. W. Carless Davis, their adviser upon the whole work, has secured as joint editor of the new volume Mr. J. R. H. Weaver, of Trinity College. The very difficult task of selection has engaged the attention of the editors and of a committee of the Delegates, and opportunity will be taken to confirm or rectify their provisional conclusions by appeal to a wider circle of experts both in and out of Oxford.

Work upon the next Supplement has been in progress for over a year. The limit of the period decided on is 1921, and it is not expected that the book can appear before 1925. It has sometimes been stated that the next Supplement is "due next year"; but the Delegates cannot think that any careful or dispassionate survey of men's careers can be published within a few months of their close.

Many if not all, of the 22 volumes are expected to go out of print in the course of 1921. This will involve the publishers in an outlay for reprinting far larger than was or could be foreseen at the time of the transfer, and amounting to many thousands of pounds. The recent rate of sale is not discouraging, and there is reason to hope that as the selling powers of the University Press throughout the Empire are brought into play, the improvement will be maintained; but the reprint cannot be sold at the present very low price, and the return will necessarily be slow.

IT PAYS TO SPECIALISE

By CLARENCE WINCHESTER.

Mr. Clarence Winchester is particularly qualified to write an article on specialisation, as in addition to his ordinary work as a journalist accustomed to both news and fiction, he is well-known as an expert contributor on Aviation and Motoring. He is the author of an early book on flying, and Editor of "Complete Aeronautics"—ED.

As the scope and usefulness of the Literary Year Book have this year been enlarged, and the new proprietor and editor has made a strong point of catering for the rising journalist and author, I am particularly glad of the opportunity of writing about the much discussed subject of specialisation.

It is all very well to be told (as I was told when I first got a job on a provincial paper) that it pays to specialise, but it is not so easy to decide upon what subject to specialise. My own experience (I weep for the loss of the editorial "we" but see no way out of the difficulty in such an article as this one!) has proved to me that the primary essentials for specialisation are :

- (a) An interest in your special subject.
- (b) A subject that will interest a fairly wide circle of readers.
- (c) The ability to write up your subject technically, semi-technically and non-technically, according to varying requirements.
- (d) A subject that will carry a certain amount of advertising.

The last clause may sound "un-literary" but in these days of commercial journalism, as much as it may be deplored, there is no room for journalists who have ideals that cannot possibly be realised. With the ethics of modern journalism I have no space or privilege to deal. There are, I will admit, one or two subjects that do not go hand in hand with the advertisement department, but such are in the minority.

Clause a is of the utmost importance. You cannot specialise in a subject if you are not interested in it. When I first specialised in flying and motoring in the days before the war I was, to put it vulgarly, "motoring and flying mad." If you are going to specialise in bees or boating you must honestly be interested in bees or boats. If you are a gardening enthusiast it is waste of time to try to work yourself into a fever over lawn tennis or tiddly-winks. If you feel ill at the sight of the sea, for heaven's sake don't start in business as a yachting expert.

It must be plain that your special subject ought to have a fairly wide appeal. You won't make much money if you restrict yourself to philosophies and religions of India—even if you are absorbed by such subjects. Far better to try your hand at articles on chicken.

Then you must be versatile enough to write technical, semi-technical and non-technical stuff if you are to make the most of your specialised knowledge. Your market is thus not restricted to any one class of periodical, though I will warn you that your non-technical articles may cause a shudder down the spines of the experts who may happen upon them! But that doesn't matter much. The experts are in the minority. Often, when a writer becomes versed in a particular subject he develops into a kind of Professor Dryasdust and at once loses his ability to write upon his subject in straightforward, simple English. I know—because I read every week some hundreds of manuscripts intended for popular consumption.

Restricted space prevents my treating the question of specialisation in anything but a brief way, but I have outlined the chief essentials for the benefit of the embryo writer. I don't think you will become a millionaire on specialisation but if you can get a sound connection for certain subjects, in addition to your regular job, the extra cheques that turn up from time to time will not be despised at the end of your financial year.

A NEW SOCIETY OF WOOD ENGRAVERS.

A new society, called the Society of Wood Engravers, has been formed in London, with headquarters at the Chenil Gallery, Chelsea. The first exhibition was held on Oct. 16th, 1920. For many years there has been a growing interest in the graphic arts. Various processes of engraving have been revived by artists as a medium for expression, commencing with etching, under the leadership of Sir Seymour Haden, and including more recently, the Society of Graver Printers in Colour, whose remarkable achievements have attracted much notice. Now comes this new society, the members of which restrict their practice to the use of wood blocks, either by cutting with a knife on the plank, or by engraving with a burin on the end of the boxwood block. The young artists design their woodcuts, and cut the blocks themselves. This is the oldest of the engraving processes, and goes back in Europe to about 1400. The exhibition at Chelsea proves that new ideas in art can find adequate expression in the old medium. The Wood Engravers have a future, it is certain, and they have begun well.

INTERNATIONAL BIBLIOGRAPHY OF THE WAR.

Writers of all kinds, on all topics, will find the International Bibliography of the War one of the most valuable tools. The world was put into the crucible by the war and for centuries to come men will want to know how the metal was purified.

The Bibliography is in the form of a card catalogue clearly typed and fully annotated, on cards of standard size, viz., 3×5. Much of the literature relating to the War is fast disappearing, more particularly those publications of fundamental importance usually known as documents. Everything published in connection with the war—books, pamphlets, leaflets, posters, circulars, post-cards, newspapers, official documents and instructions, etc.—will be included from all countries. So great a work cannot be looked for in every library, but sets of these cards are at the Public Library, Liverpool and at the Public Library, Edinburgh, in this small country. In Canada there is a set at the Public Library, Toronto. In Australia, the cards are under the control of the Prime Minister's Department. Already many thousands of cards have been deposited at these Libraries. It is anticipated that sets will be available in other countries. The thanks of unborn generations will be due to these libraries, and to those in other countries for their public spirited action in helping to save for the future the knowledge we have gained and garnered from the greatest of all wars. The catalogue shows, in strict alphabetical order, the author and subject of every item. Its usefulness is not limited to a history of the war, but it will prove of incalculable value to the chemist who wishes to ascertain what the war did for chemicals and their development: to the social or political economist who wishes to ascertain, say, how and why wages rose in the war: to the topographer who has to find what the war did for countries, towns and villages: to the politician who wishes to draw every fresh lesson from the political unity during the great struggle: to the business man who will always look back with pride on what the men of his class did for the country: and to the literary man who must find his inspiration, if there is to be that revival of letters which we all look forward to, in that great burst of national enthusiasm which won the war: and in fact to every enquirer upon every subject. Perhaps more than anything else the Bibliography will help to preserve peace in the world for the future. And it cannot fail to promote a better feeling between all nations because it served to present the different points of views of the various peoples not alone of those engaged in the struggle but of neutrals as well. This, of course, can be brought about only by the work of writers on all topics throughout the world and it is in this respect that our readers will find the usefulness and value of the The Bibliography so great. It will be found a ready and infallible tool for everyone from the lowliest journalist to the Prime Minister. The method of use is simply to turn to the cards on the subject desired.—ALEX T. PHILIP.

HOW I MADE MY HOBBIES PAY

BY DONALD W. HORNER, F.R.A.S., F.R. Met. Soc.

Nearly everyone has a hobby—or if not, they ought to have. Whether it be gardening, fishing, or even only the playing of games, a hobby is a healthy distraction for the mind—taking it for a certain period each day out of its usual “groove.”

But this article is not so much concerned in pointing out what hobby to take up, which, after all should be the choice of the individual, as how to make that hobby pay for itself, with perhaps a little over.

Now, taking one of my hobbies for example—Meteorology, or the Science of the Weather, it would seem a difficult enough subject to popularise as everyone is more or less at loggerheads with the “Clerk of the Weather,” yet by practice I have succeeded in making the subject sufficiently interesting that I am asked to write articles and even books upon it. The same may be said of my secondary hobby—Astronomy—The Science of the Sun, Moon and Stars, and by some called the “Queen of Sciences.” But how do you start? someone may ask! Well, although it is never wise to pay for the publication of a novel, it is advisable to pay for one’s first book on a scientific subject to be printed, and for this reason, that it brings one’s work before the public in a way otherwise impossible; and when one work on a scientific subject has run into two editions, one may then anticipate further orders. The difference between a novel and a scientific or technical work is that whilst the circulation of the former is ephemeral, scarcely ever lasting [except in the case of a standard author] over six months, the good scientific work will go on into edition after edition for practically a lifetime. We must be careful, however, at the outset to select a good publisher, and if we can afford to publish at our own expense do so on commission, that is—the author pays all expenses of production and advertising, the publisher taking also a commission of (say) 15% on the sales. In this way the author receives the statements of account once in six months, and knows where he is.

Then the day will come when the same reliable publisher will offer to take up the author’s work at “publisher’s risk,” and pay the author royalties on sales; when this moment arrives the author may consider that what was once his hobby is in a fair way, with energy and perseverance, to growing into a profession.

With regard to sending articles to Editors, it is a good plan to select from the pages of the Literary Year Book names of journals or magazines likely to accept stuff dealing with our pet subject, and, if possible, become a regular reader of one or two of them. In this way we shall see what sort of matter they accept, and can then send a “letter to the Editor” on some point on which we are well informed. Should this be printed we can then try an article or two and if favourably received, we might write to the Editor suggesting a series of illustrated articles "at usual rates." The illustrations can be photos or drawings, or failing our ability to produce either, we can usually borrow electros or half-tone blocks (acknowledging source) illustrating our theme.

Of course we shall not "make a fortune" by this means, but a judicious "working" of publishers and editors should yield us substantial "pocket-money," or in the case of a lady, what is known as "pin-money." At any rate it is well worth the effort of trying for it, as, apart from monetary considerations, we obtain a large amount of interest and amusement from the effort.

QUEST OF THE SHORT STORY.

By LOUIS VINCENT.

The writer is the editor of a well known magazine of fiction.

Every week of the year I receive an average of one hundred short stories for publication. Unless they are obviously and flagrantly bad they are carefully read and their merits and demerits weighed up. If five out of the hundred are suitable that is a big percentage; as a rule the rate of acceptances does not exceed 2 per cent.

This is all the more surprising when it is acknowledged that the majority of short stories submitted are well written and constructed. Doubtless the authors are puzzled over their failure, and ascribe it to the perversity of "some fool of an editor" who cannot recognise genius when he sees it.

In reality, no one is more pleased than an editor when he happens across a real, good short story. If it is by a new or unknown writer, his pleasure is intensified that he has made a find.

The first essential of a good short story is plot; the second, treatment. If the treatment is fresh and unusual and the result convincing, the plot need not be startling or even original.

American short story writers are the best in the world, and I should be inclined to put at the head of the list the women. Fanny Hurst and Fanny Hensley Lea.

The quintessence of the American short story is its sense of actuality. The theme may be impossible or hackneyed, although it is rarely either, but its dexterous manipulation makes it live anew.

They write with pens of quicksilver and their imagination is boundless. The methods are swift and daring, but never indelicate.

They have a way of side tracking the development of their plots so that the reader is kept guessing until the end and nothing is more valuable in a short story than the element of surprise.

There is more than enough room in the magazines for the clever writer who has yet to win his spurs.

GARDENING ARTICLES

A Source of Income Journalists Neglect.

By E. T. ELLIS.

The journalist who cannot or does not write gardening matter in these days is neglecting one of the most profitable sources of income, for I know very few papers which are not more than glad to consider not only practical gardening articles but general articles with a distinct and pronounced gardening taste about them. That one needs to be a gardener to write gardening is to some extent true, but who in these days does not grow potatoes for himself and his family on an allotment, or discuss gardening experiences with friends met on the bus, in the tram or in the tube?

The journalist who turns his attention to gardening articles may unwisely wish to specialise in the group of papers which are frankly gardening papers. This is a great mistake. They will pay you a paltry 6s. a column containing about 800 words, and if they rise to 15s. a thousand words one must consider oneself generously paid. If a name in the world of horticulture is to be made, probably the quickest way to make it is to concentrate on these papers, but otherwise they need not be much troubled with.

It is the daily and weekly papers of the general press that the journalist with an aptitude for writing gardening articles should send his matter to. These pay for gardening matter at the same rate as for general articles as I have constantly proved, and two to four guineas per thousand words for an article which can be run off in no time as it needs little or no working out or planning is, even in these days adequate remuneration.

THE TOPICAL ELEMENT.

While ordinary popular articles with a direct gardening ring are frequently accepted by Editors of both London and Provincial dailies and weeklies, there is no doubt that the man who makes his articles topical stands a far better chance. For instance if he sees that a wave of Potato Blight has swept over the counties of Cornwall and Devonshire one July he should promptly send an article on "Potato Blight: Its Cause and Cure" to one of the many Cornish or Devonshire newspapers. It matters not whether he lives at Truro or Glasgow; as long as he understands his subject and writes about it in a bright non-scientific popular manner it is pretty sure to go in for Editors being human like to feel that they are publishing something which 90% of their readers will eagerly act upon. In the same way if he hears that Manchester Corporation are having a great show of allotment produce, or the Liverpool Dock Companies organising a show of vegetables among their workers he should promptly offer an article on "How to Succeed When Showing" to Manchester and Liverpool papers. In precisely the same manner he will offer a practical article "How to Grow Prize Potatoes" to a paper which is offering four guineas for the best potato, and one on "Caterpillar Capturing" if a certain district is having its crops devoured by these pests.

At Christmas, Easter, Whitsuntide and the August Bank Holiday the journalist who writes gardening matter should reap a harvest. Special articles on Easter Hints, What to be Doing at Whitsuntide, Holiday Work on the Allotments, and Christmas Crop Getting should be posted off well in advance, and though the same article cannot of course be used twice there is such a wealth of subjects to be dealt with at these times that at least three if not even half a dozen articles could be written on each season.

Considering subjects to write about in the Winter, Spring, Summer and Autumn they are almost numberless. In the winter an article Delving For Treasure dealing with the value of deep digging is almost certain to see light in print. In the Spring Sowing Schemes : or How to get the Most from your Plot is not likely to be rejected, while a breezy article How to Make Money from 300 Sq. Yards will generally prove an instant seller. In the Summer such side lines as Flower Scents : How to Make and Preserve Them may well be tried, and the autumn season will suggest such articles as How to Grow your own Manure for the Allotment, How to Preserve Fruit and Vegetables, Making Money from Wild Herbs, with practical articles on How to Store Vegetables, etc.

These are only a few suggestions, and with a little thought countless others will occur to the journalist. After having a really good season he should, I may suggest in conclusion, sit down and write in a humorous style The Lighter Side of Growing Spuds for a magazine or popular weekly which is almost sure to sell at sight.

ANCIENT WRITING MATERIALS

Reprinted, by permission from the Glasgow Herald.

In the second century B.C. an improved method of preparing and dressing skins for writing purposes was discovered by the Greeks. Eumenes II., King of Pergamus, conceived the idea of forming a library at Pergamus larger than that at Alexandria in Egypt, which, it is said, contained 700,000 volumes. To prevent him from carrying out the object, Ptolemy Epiphanes, King of Egypt, prohibited the exportation of paper from Egypt, which was made from the papyrus, a reed which grows on the banks of the Nile. Eumenes, however, soon devised other means for obtaining writing material, and invented a new process of manufacturing skins for this purpose at Pergamus, where the art of preparing and dressing parchment was brought to such perfection that it surpassed the Egyptian paper in fineness and smoothness.

The Latin term pergamena, of which our word parchment is a corruption, got its name from the city of Pergamus, where it was first manufactured. Before the time of Eumenes skins prepared for writing on were too coarse and thick for book purposes, but at Pergamus the art of making them thin and smooth was discovered, and the skins were preserved from the attacks of book-worms by being washed carefully with citron oil. It was at Rome, however, that the art was brought to perfection, and a finer parchment called vellum was first manufactured about the beginning of the Christian era. It was called mumbrana vitulina, and was prepared from the skins of very young calves. It was made as thin as paper and formed into leaves called membranes. Cicero called his four books of academics "quatuor libri e membranis facti." The Roman vellum was so white and easily soiled that the side of the skin not to be written on was left yellow. Skins to be used on both sides were in later times coloured violet or purple, and the letters were written in gold or silver. Among the Douce collection of MSS. in the Bodleian Library is a copy of the Psalter written on purple vellum about the end of the ninth century. Vellum was in general use all over Europe between the sixth and thirteenth centuries.

Before the invention of printing, engrossers on vellum formed a large class, and were of three grades—ordinary writers, called scribes or librarians; quick or shorthand writers, called tachygraphists; and fair hand writers, called caligraphists. The work of those was examined by overseers, who signed their names at the end of each MS. In the Bodleian Library is a copy of Plato's Dialogues written on 418 vellum quarto leaves in the year 896 by an engrosser, who styles himself "Caligraphus." The sum paid for this copy was thirteen Byzantine nummi, which would be at the rate of about 6d. a page in our money. The first MSS. were executed at Constantinople, and are remarkable for the great beauty of their writing and the splendour of their decoration. The Codex Alexandrinus written in uncial letters on very thin vellum about the sixth century is one of the great attractions among the MSS. in the British Museum. It was presented to Charles I. by Cyril, Patriarch of Constantinople. Illuminators and painters on vellum were also largely employed. The art of painting on vellum was common before painting with oil colours was discovered, and the invention of printing did not put a stop to the labours of the illuminators, for masterpieces of illuminated art are to be found in books printed on vellum, which takes all kinds of colours, but red, green, and blue are the usual. In the Lambeth Library are some very fine examples of painting on vellum, especially in the copies of St. Jerome's version of the Scriptures executed in Germany in the twelfth century.

During the Middle Ages the industry of the engrossers was gradually absorbed by the monks, and wherever there was a monastery the manufacture of vellum was carried on in the neighbourhood. Monastic institutions seem to have been specially made for the preservation of ancient MSS. during a period when, except for such a provision, they would all have been destroyed. The monks themselves guarded them with jealous care, for nearly all their MSS. have the usual subjoined anathema :—" Whosoever removeth this volume from the same mentioned convent, may the anger of the Lord overtake him in this world and in the next to all eternity." When Andrew Wynton was prior of the Monastery of St. Servanus or St. Serf on the Island of Lochleven about 1400 A.D. he wrote his original chronicle of Scotland, which was translated into the Scottish language, and it may be interesting to record that in the village of Kinnesswood, on the shore of the loch, parchment and vellum are still manufactured. The industry had probably originated with the monks, whom it has survived, and a few years ago skins were still being made by hand by a man of the name of Birrel, who stated in 1904 that he had no apprentices, and that the industry would probably die with him. For three centuries the family of Birrel have been employed to supply the Scottish Offices of State with parchment and vellum. That these skins can well be made by hand is shown by the fact that the Great Seal and Chancery Offices of Scotland are, or were, a few years ago still supplied from the little work at Kinnesswood.

WRITING FOR THE PRESS

(The following notes are not intended for the doyens of the literary profession, but as a Literary Year Book should cater for the aspirant as well as the teacher they have been inserted with a view to helping the would-be editor on his way. After all it is the use of the individual's own brains that makes him a success or condemns him to failure, and the presentation of these notes is with this object alone : they are not intended to lay down hard and fast lines for articles or story-writing, but to reduce general accepted facts to some common basis of scientific structure.—Editor.)

I. TO WRITE AN ARTICLE.

THE TITLE.—Choose a title that can be understood by everyone and which embraces everything.

A title of 4 words, or less, is preferable, as 4 words can be taken in at a glance and easily remembered.

Choose a title that in some way arrests the attention, i.e. an alliterative one, or one that makes a " Catchy " phrase.

The title should express the subject of the Ms., or the chief idea contained in it, and if necessary a secondary title should be given if it is deemed necessary to further explain the matter.

THE SUBJECT MATTER. Having chosen the subject for a Ms. (and decided on the title) think out what you know about it ; then then decide what point of view the article should be written to make it easily saleable.

Every subject can be divided into a number of main headings, the point of each being one of the chief characteristics of the subject,

Take each main heading and sub-divide it into the minor points that make up that main point.

If necessary sub-divide the minor points until each separate fact that is of any importance in the making up of the whole, has been tracked out. When all the small causes have been traced out from the main headings up to which they lead, and thoroughly exhausted, the framework of the article is made.

The actual writing of the Ms. is equivalent to building up this framework. This is done by placing each detail in the proper section, i.e. grouping together those that are analogous to each other, and choosing only those points which are necessary in working out the explanation of the bigger point.

It is not necessary to make use of every fact (i.e. bit of knowledge) at your disposal. Choose rather those that best show the trend of your argument.

THE Ms. Begin the Ms. with a sentence or paragraph that presents in general outline the whole subject and its chief characteristics.

Then take each of these main themes and work them out from the smallest points, showing how these merge into the important points. The start should be equivalent to "in the beginning."

Be careful with details to choose only those that illustrate some more or less important point or that has come bearing on the argument.

To a great extent the selection of detail depends on the general effect that is aimed at ; and on the required length of the Ms. It may be necessary to put in a good deal of detail that is not really essential, in order to " pad out " the article to the necessary length ; but this must not be done obviously. The details must be introduced round the points that can bear enlargement, and must be introduced in such a way that they appear necessary towards illustrating the argument.

Having stated in the title and opening paragraph the point or fact you want to prove, the body of the article should be devoted to the proof, which is finally arrived at in the climax. The climax, therefore, is the proof of the fact stated in the title.

The working out of the proof should be done along the pre-arranged lines of the framework, and should begin where the lines start, with the least important facts.

These lines gradually merge into each other as the more important points are reached, until finally they all meet in the climax and the argument is proved.

THREE POSSIBLE KINDS OF MSS. THAT ARE NOT STORIES.

(I) THE CONCRETE ARTICLE. This is the article written on some concrete subject, and giving some definite information on that subject.

In dealing with Mss. of this kind, the writer's aim is to put his own knowledge into a form which is attractive enough to interest both those who know something of the subject and those who know nothing. The structure or framework is composed of definite facts, and each sentence should contain some little point of information not contained in the sentence before. From the first sentence to the last there should be some connecting thread ; the idea in each sentence depending to some extent on the idea in the preceding sentence.

The whole Ms. should give the effect of a chain, the sentences being the links, each one connected in the right way with the one before and the one after. But this chain should be planned out on the principle of the framework, and shall start from an important point, i.e., the statement in a few words of the main point of the Ms. ; this is equivalent to the seal at the beginning of the watch-chain.

The main body of the Ms.—the chain—is the series of facts leading to and dependent on each other. The climax—the watch—is the main idea again, which the facts prove or explain—the watch being an elaborated edition of the seal.

The fact that the subject of a Ms. is in itself of real interest does not depend with the fact that the treatment should be attractive. An interesting subject, put into as attractive a form as possible is far more interesting to the reader than an interesting fact with an unattractive appearance. If you have a good thing to start with, make it better still.

(2) THE ABSTRACT ARTICLE. This is an article which really consists of a collection of ideas, opinions, or suggestions, on some abstract subject, i.e. some subject that cannot readily be defined and which comes to no definite conclusion on the subject, and which gives no real information.

Such an article depends for its interest entirely on its treatment, i.e. its outside appearance.

There are various ideas (these corresponded to the facts of a concrete article) that can be given on any abstract subject ; and these ideas are connected by reason of their being expressions of one and the same subject ; but they in no way depend upon each other, either for confirmation or in working out some conclusion.

A Ms. containing a collection of such ideas is like a string of beads. There is no reason why one idea (or one bead) should be put next to any other ; yet they all hang on one string, the subject that they discuss.

The beginning and end being like the clasps of a necklace, which meet at the same point and serve one purpose.

A Ms of this kind is written on an interesting idea—not an interesting fact.

(3) THE ARTICLE THAT IS HALF CONCRETE, HALF ABSTRACT. This is a Ms. about some subject that is abstract rather than concrete, i.e. that is a quality, state or action, and not something that can be seen, or heard, or touched.

But such a Ms must contain some definite information. It should leave the reader in possession of something he did not know before ; something that he himself can put to a practical use.

It is a combination of the concrete and abstract articles. The subject is "abstract" but in the treatment there is some "concrete" information. In a concrete Ms. the plan adopted for the treatment is done so for a definite purpose. To arrive at the end from the beginning certain definite points must be touched.

In an abstract Ms. the end is practically the same point as the beginning ; and to reach it it is permissible to take any course that is attractive. In an abstract-concrete Ms., the end is a stage farther on than the beginning, and therefore a certain amount of ground must be covered, but the exact route is left to the writer to choose.

II. TO WRITE A STORY.

In writing a story work on the same lines.

Develop the action of the plot from definite facts.

The difference between an article and a story being that for a story you must take the facts from your imagination, instead of taking them from your store of knowledge as you do for an article.

1. Stories can be divided into two kinds.

WITH A DEFINITE PLOT. These tell us something about the characters, and what they did. The reader knows a good deal more at the end of them than he did before reading the story. In writing a story of this kind the writer has a definite situation up to which he wants to bring his characters. First he must decide on the best way of taking them there ; then he must put his method into the most telling form. The situation at the end of the story should leave the reader satisfied that given the facts stated at the beginning and the subsequent action of the characters, such a climax was inevitable. The framework of such a story depends on the facts that caused certain actions which are bound to lead to a certain result.

2. STORIES WHICH ARE ABSTRACT. These are stories with no real plot. It opens with a certain situation ; gives a description of some state of affairs and the people concerned in it.

The body of the story gives some reason for this situation and some account of the causes which brought it about. The end is another modified form of the same situation, with perhaps a picture of the immediate result which was hinted at or suggested at the beginning. Such a story leaves the reader in exactly the same position as regards information at the end as he was at the beginning. The structure of a story of this kind is simple in the extreme. It is the handling of the structure that makes the story good or bad. In shape such a story is like a crescent. It starts at one point, broadens out as it brings in the detail and causes : then narrows into a point similar to the first one. The breadth in the middle of the story developing equally from either ends.

By ERNEST A. DENCH.

Many people are apt to remark, after visiting a cinema theatre, to the effect that photo-plays are easy to write. This is where such folk are at fault, for film plays are not so simple as they appear on the screen. The three essentials that make for success are imagination, knowledge of technique, and common sense. Moving pictures have certain limitations, of which an explanation follows :

The first mistake is to take a subject that lends itself to better treatment as a short story. Such a play is one that requires a great deal of explanatory matter in order to interpret its meaning in silent drama, by way of sub-titles and screen messages. A certain number of these are allowed, but as a rule there should not be more than ten to twelve in a thousand-foot subject, which takes eighteen minutes to run. Even this is a lot, and it is best that all written explanations are reduced to a minimum, and screen messages be used in preference to sub-titles.

The action should be kept in one country all the time. In fiction one has the whole world to roam in, but when it is realized that in a photo-play all such settings nearly always have to be taken on the spot, it will be readily seen that in ordinary cases it is impossible to go out of one country for the purpose of filming one subject.

Besides wanting strong, original plots, producers now need the characterization well developed. But it must be remembered that these very traits and characters have to be brought out by the actions of the artistes.

Now to the details of scenario construction. The word "scenario" is given as the name of the photo-play manuscript. With most authors the first thing to do is think out well, before putting pen to paper, an original and presentable idea; then the next move is to weave a plot around it. When the plot has been carefully thought out, the author can go ahead and lay the scenario out scene by scene.

To illustrate my meaning, I cannot do better than give an actual example, which will make clear to the reader the correct manner in which to set out a photo-play. There are five separate portions, as follows:

Title.—This should be written around the main idea of the play, as it greatly enables the writer to describe the play in an apt manner, while not at the same time giving too much away. There is an art in concocting a title that explains little, yet promises much. Every photo-play-wright should strive to get away from the conventional path by giving every scenario a catching title—something that will arrest the attention of everybody. It may help to effect the sale of the play, for it has done so before now.

Cast of Characters.—Briefly explain the characteristics, etc., of each leading role, and include any supers that will be required in the play—those that take minor parts—a waiter, for example. See that every character has his part to play, and cut out any that are not necessary for the successful presenting of the play.

Synopsis.—Here the story of the play is set forth, and the one important point is to master the difficulty of condensing it so as not to exceed 300 words at the very most for full reel plays. To the experienced photo-play-wright such a feat is not hard, for he avoids the narrative strain, and writes action instead—not the action that takes place in every scene, but that in the story itself. The synopsis is more commonly known as the advertisement of the film, for it is not at all unusual for an overworked scenario editor to accept a scenario after reading the synopsis alone. This, therefore, should be written as convincingly as possible, but at the same time exaggeration of any detail should be avoided.

List of Scenes.—The use of this is to summarize in a brief fashion all the scenes there are in a play. It may be presumed that the correct thing to do is to write each one down in rotation. As most plays are taken in parts, all the scenes in one setting go down together in the following manner :

Scenes 1, 5, 10 : Interior—Dining-Room.

Scenes 2, 6, 12 : Exterior—House.

And so on !

Scenario Proper.—This is the most important detail of all, for the scenario proper is set out scene by scene. Every time the camera changes its position from one place to another constitutes the finish of one scene and the commencement of another. The business should be detailed sufficiently to enable the players to grasp fully the possibilities of the play. Sub-titles and screen messages should break in where needed, and an exterior scene should always be used when a person is travelling from one house to another, so as to impress the fact on the spectators that it is not the same house, for it is bad form for a player to drop from the first house into the second without fixing this detail in the minds of the audience. Do not introduce a lengthy scene unless its action is broken with explanatory matter, as otherwise spectators grow restless. What is going to happen with the gradual straightening out of things should be kept until the climax, and it improves a photo-play if the unexpected happens, so that a surprise is sprung on the audience. In fact, the interest should be worked up from the very start and kept going until the conclusion of the play.

Expense is a serious matter that needs studying before sensational situations are introduced, which may cause the film producers to spend more than usual, as it greatly reduces the selling possibilities of a scenario. Some will go to the expense, but others will not ; for this reason the beginner is advised to restrict his or her efforts at first to straightforward and original subjects, pretty domestic comedies, healthy dramas, and rollicking comics, such being always in demand. To be in constant touch with what is happening in the film world is only possible by taking in a trade paper.

Scenarios should be submitted in the usual way, preferably typewritten.

In most cases the remuneration is much better than it formerly was. In England it varies from £1 1s. to £20. The price paid in the United States for scenarios is anything from £3 to £50. In conclusion, the author should avoid hackneyed and unpleasant subjects, and should strive to write plays that tend to elevate the motion-picture industry.

Further information as to where to sell scenarios will be supplied by the Editor on application to him at 67 Dale Street Liverpool.

LAW AND LETTERS: COPYRIGHT

In previous editions of the Literary Year Book there has been much information with regard to the Copyright Acts both in this country, throughout the Empire and abroad, and as copies of the Book are available at most places of reference it has been deemed expedient in this volume of the Book to try and put before readers and users of the Book the more salient points with regard to the sale and disposal of Literary Property.

It has been truly said that every author should also be a lawyer, and whilst the ordinary common sense rule of life govern to a large extent Copyright it is really more useful for an author to have on his bookshelf some really good works relating to copyright, such as those mentioned below, than for an epitome of copyright law to be compressed into a few pages of this book.

There are many pitfalls in dealing with publishers of books and periodicals and with the present condition of the literary market and domestic life, when each author has to meet rebuffs and kicks when higher than pre-war remuneration is asked for, it is very desirable in his own and his colleagues interests that he should adopt something like Trade Union principles and band himself with those organisations which will protect his interests. Every author, whether an amateur or a professional should be a Member of that Society which has done so much for the profession as a whole—the Incorporated Society of Authors, Playwrights and Composers, and Journalists pure and simple should certainly make a point of joining either the National Union of Journalists or the Institute of Journalists.

Whilst recommending this course to authors the Editor holds no brief for any of these societies but he can testify from his own experience and that of his friends how very useful these societies are when their organisation and knowledge is made use of. It is no use being a Member unless their advice and help is asked, and it is quite sensible to admit that they with the many thousands of incidents which happen during the course of a year and how they deal with them, must have better knowledge of handling a delicate situation than the individual author whose knowledge is circumscribed by what happens in his own limited sphere.

If advice is needed on copyright it is far better to ask such an Organisation as the Society of Authors than it is to try and find out and solve intricate problems for oneself and further one is always sure of the best advice as well as impartial criticism of the actions already taken.

For those authors who wish further knowledge of the various copyright Acts,—which are obtainable from the Stationery Offices of the Government at Kingsway, W.C.2., Manchester, Glasgow, Edinburgh and Dublin, and any stationer can secure any Act of Parliament on request,—the following very brief and rough outline the Acts now in force may be of interest :—

Under the act which came into operation on July 1st, 1912, Copyright has been extended to the life of the author and a period of fifty years after his death. One great advantage of this extended and definite period is that the copyright of all works by the same author will expire at the same time. The Dominions and Foreign countries are also included under specific regulations. The demand of the Public Libraries are much the same as before, but the National Library of Wales is now included so that copies may have now to be delivered to the Bodelian Library, Oxford ; University Library, Cambridge, Library of the Faculty of Advocates, Edinburgh, Library of Trinity College Dublin, in addition to the usual statutory copy to the trustees of the British Museum.

Infringements of Copyright

These are committed—

1. By publication in the United Kingdom of an unauthorized edition, or importation for sale of foreign reprints, of a copyright work—i.e., literary piracy.
2. By the illegitimate appropriation of another's literary labour—i.e., literary larceny.

Civil Remedies for Infringement

The statute of 1911 by Section 6 preserves all the remedies by way of damages injunction (in Scotland an interdict), and accounts for infringement of copyright ; but if a defendant alleges in his defence and proves at the trial that he was not aware, and had not reasonable means of making himself aware, that copyright subsisted in the work, the plaintiff can only get an injunction against him and not damages.

The property in infringing copies is by Section 7 given to the owner of the copyright, who may bring an action claiming that the possession of such copies should be handed over to him.

Limitations of Action

Any such actions as above must be brought within three years of the infringement.

Other Remedies

The new Act provides for the United Kingdom summary remedies in the police court against any person who knowingly—

1. Makes for sale or hire any infringing copy of a work in which copyright subsists ; or
2. Sells or lets for hire or by way of trade exposes or offers for sale or hire any infringing copy ; or
3. Distributes infringing copies for the purposes of trade or to such an extent as to affect prejudicially the owner of the copyright ;
4. Imports for sale or hire into the United Kingdom any infringing copy.

For any of these four offences the Court may impose a penalty not exceeding 40s. for every copy dealt with, but not exceeding £50 in respect of the same transaction. Further, if any person knowingly makes, or has in his possession, any plate for the purpose of making infringing copies, the Court may order such plates or copies of the work in the possession of the alleged offender (whether he be convicted or not) to be forfeited or destroyed.

Infringement and Fair Use

Copyright in a work shall be deemed to be infringed by anyone who, without the consent of the owner of the copyright, does anything the sole right to do which is vested in the owner of the copyright, but the following exceptions are made and do not (so says the new law) amount to infringements :

1. Any fair dealing with any work for the purposes of private study, research, criticism, review, or newspaper summary.
2. The publication in a newspaper of a lecture delivered in public, unless the report is prohibited by a notice conspicuously placed in the building where the lecture is held.
3. The publication in a collection mainly composed of non-copyright matter intended for the use of schools of short passages from works in which copyright subsists, provided that not more than two of such passages from works by the same author are published by the same publisher within five years, and that the source from which such passages are taken is acknowledged.
4. The reading or recitation in public by one person of any reasonable extract from any published work.

It is not an infringement of copyright to publish a report in a newspaper of an address of a political nature delivered at a public meeting. So with these extensions the law stands much as it did.

Fair use, however, may be made of even copyright works of other authors in the composition or compilation of new books, but the new work must be substantially the result of independent labour and research. Thus the text for a new edition of old MSS. in the British Museum must not be copied from an existing copyright edition, but from the MSS. An abridgement may or may not be an infringement of copyright, according to the use made of the original work. In compiling "anthologies," no use whatever must be made of copyright works without first obtaining permission of the owner of the copyright.

THE NOBEL PRIZE AUTHOR.

M. Knut Hamsen, the Norwegian who has been awarded the Nobel Prize in literature for 1920, has been called "Isben's successor." He is the author of some 20 novels and plays which have been translated into at least 16 different languages. Over 60, he is the son of peasants who lived at Lom in Gudbrandsdal, Norway. He was apprenticed to a shoemaker and secretly wrote poetry whenever he could find time. At 17 he published his first works, a long poem and a novel. Later he worked as a fisherman and at last as a journalist. Englishmen he views in characters as cold and perverse beings filled with "spleen."

LITERARY PROPERTY.

Author, Publisher, Editor and Agent.

By G. HERBERT THRING, Solicitor.

It is absolutely essential, even if an Author never intends to conduct his own business arrangements, that he should have an accurate knowledge of the extent of his property, the rights he possesses, and the best method of marketing these rights and that property.

This statement would seem to be a platitude, but it is a platitude too often neglected. It is essential for the Author who lives by his pen. It is essential for the amateur. Perhaps even more so for the latter, as it is not fair that he should throw his work thoughtlessly on the literary market and undersell his fellows. It is essential for many writers of history, writers of biographies, writers of one exhaustive treatise, on some technical subject "et hoc genus omne" who should take especial care, partly, for selfish reasons, but more especially for the benefit of the body of the profession. The days are gone by since it was considered a mean thing to accept payment for the written work of an artist's brain.

This by way of a Preface :—

Of what marketable rights does the Copyright exist ?

The Author can grant a license or sell a right to do any of the following things :—

1. To dramatise his work or convert it into a cinema film.

The marketing of these valuable portions of the copyright will not be dealt with here. Information must be sought in other places. (See short note on Copyright p 405. Ed.) But the Author must remember that both the dramatic and cinema right may be exceedingly valuable, perhaps even more valuable financially than the rights of publications in book form. No Author should grant a publisher any control over these rights or any share in them. The Author might grant a publisher a percentage up to a fixed sum if either of the rights is marketed through his introduction under a contract signed by the Author, but the Author must be careful that he does not add up his agency fees by paying his own agent on work which should have been done by him but has in fact been done by the publisher. It is needless perhaps to add, that as a rule these rights and licenses are only financially valuable in the case of the copyright works of fiction whether novels or short stories.

2. To publish the work in Book Form in the English language.

A License or sale under this heading may be limited in many different ways :—

- (a) By publication at a fixed price in a fixed form.
- (b) By country.
- (c) By time.

and the contracts are usually in one of the following forms :—

- (1) A Commission agreement.
- (2) An agreement for a sale outright.
- (3) A profit sharing agreement.
- (4) A royalty agreement.

Contracts under the above headings are the only contracts worth considering. There are various bastard forms of contract but they should not be considered by the Author, nor do they usually emanate from the first class business firms. The guarantee contract, by which the Author guarantees to purchase a certain number of copies on publication at a fixed rate. The payment towards the cost of production, by which the Author pays a sum and though he may obtain a larger royalty in consequence, does not obtain any share in the stock which belongs wholly to the publisher. And there are others. Of the hybrid crew let the author beware.

But even the four forms of contract with which it is proposed to deal, cannot possibly cover the infinite variations that it may be necessary to make to meet special circumstances. “Tot homines quot sententio.” It may equally be said so many books published so many forms of agreement. Readers therefore, can only be lead along the main paths ; while never straggling far from the main lines they will be of necessity bound, from time to time, to make slight deviations.

It would take a treatise almost as big as the whole Literary Year Book to deal with every possible form of Literary Contract.

THE COMMISSION AGREEMENT.

This contract as a rule is of no use to the writer of fiction unless he has some personal reason for keeping a tight control over his output.

It is a poor form of contract for the popular Book or the book, whatever its nature, which may appeal to the general public. It is an important form of contract to the writer on technical subjects who desires to retain the power from time to time to bring his work up-to-date.

It is almost an essential form to the Specialist who appeals to a small public, who makes his own public and whose circulation is practically independent of his publisher's efforts and whose desire is not so much for financial success as to support his reputation as an expert in the line which he adorns.

This method of publication is not a popular method with the Publisher. It may give him an infinite number of small worries which he will consider hardly comensurate with the financial return. There are arguments against it also from the author's point of view, the chief one lies in the fact that the publisher has not sunk his capital in the venture. It is naturally more important for the publisher to retrieve his capital than to reap the small profits that may come to him through publishing on Commission.

There are two methods of publication on Commission.

1. Where the Author does his own printing and supplies the Publisher with copies for sale.

2. Where the Author does the printing, etc., through the Publisher as well as employing him to put the work on the market.

As the greater includes the less it will only be necessary to deal with Number 2.

It will be seen that the first essential for the Author is to decide in his own mind how many copies of his book he needs and the style and format in which it is to be produced.

Having come to this decision he must obtain a close estimate from the Publisher.

The estimate should include the following items —

1. Composition per sheet.
2. Paper per sheet or ream.
3. Machining per sheet or ream..
4. Binding per 100 copies.
5. (a) Moulding and stereotyping per 16 pages, if required.
(b) Rent for keeping the type standing.

NOTE.—In the case of technical works which may need considerable alteration for a second edition, it is often cheaper to pay a rent and keep the type standing. The printer will most probably keep the type standing rent free for three months.

6. Binders Blocks for lettering and design if any.
7. Corrections per hour.

The question of the cost of illustrations may also arise. Sometimes an author will prefer to get these done separately, but if they are done through the publisher the cost must be included in the estimate. The author must take care that his estimate is a fair one. If he has his doubts and has no friend with special knowledge to whom he can refer, his best plan is to get some other estimates from other printers and compare the terms.

When the estimate is carefully and clearly settled it is in a fit shape to be incorporated as a schedule to the agreement.

The Author's contract must contain the following Clauses.

1. A Clause by which the Publisher undertakes to produce the work as per the estimate in the Schedule and to have it ready for the market on or before a fixed date. Time should be of the essence of the contract.

2. As a consideration for this, the Author generally undertakes to pay the Publisher one third of the estimate on signing the contract, one third on receipt of final proofs, and one third when the work is ready for the market in accordance with the terms of the estimate. He should not pay the Publisher the whole amount on signing the contract as he has no hold over the Publisher in case the work is not ready for the market by the agreed date.

These two clauses complete the first part of the contract dealing with the production of the work. Then should follow the necessary clauses dealing with its publication.

1. The Author should grant a license to publish the work at the price of limited as to time or country or edition or subject to any other limitations that the Author may think fit and the Publisher should undertake to travel the book, to advertise it in his own circulars and catalogues and push through all the ordinary trade Channels free of charge to the author and at the published price of

2. The most important clause, which should be the next clause, will decide the question how the publisher is to account to the Author per copy sold.

(a) The simplest arrangement both for Author and Publisher is for the Publisher to account to the Author at a fixed price for every copy sold. But the sum fixed must be an equitable sum and must not be, as in many Publishers agreements, the lowest price at which books are sold to the trade. If an equitable sum is fixed all the worry that is likely to arise out of the accounts will be at an end. The publisher will merely have to state the number of copies sold to account at a fixed price and deduct his commission.

(b) The alternative arrangement is for the publisher to account for every copy sold at the price at which it is sold. In this case, however, it is essential that the author should fix some figure below which no sales can be made without his sanction. Under this method, difficulties and disputes may arise in the accounts as there are many different prices under which copies are sold to the trade. There is the price for the single copy bought across the publisher's counter. There are the prices in those cases where copies are sold in small quantities. And in those where the copies are sold 13 as 12 subject to various discounts, according to the number bought.

From this statement it will be seen why it is essential that the author should fix the price below which copies must not be placed on the market. From this detailed account the publisher then will deduct his percentage.

There are special terms for the sales to the Colonies and Foreign markets. These should all be arranged beforehand and from these again the publisher's commission will have to be deducted and it must be set out in the agreement that no other charges are to be made against the author.

What will be the percentage given to the publisher is a matter of bargaining and in some ways one of the most important points in the contract. Generally, it will not be less than 10% and should not be more than 15%.

3. A clause should be inserted that the author shall not be deprived of the sale proceeds of any of the copies if the purchase money is not paid to the publishers.

4. A clause binding the publisher to send the usual copies to the Universities and the British Museum.

The advertising in the papers for which the author is responsible is better, on the whole, done through the agency of the publisher, as advertisements in publishers lists will be more likely to be read than an isolated advertisement inserted by the author himself, unless the author is willing to spend a large sum on advertising. If he advertises through the publisher, then

5. A clause in the agreement by which the publisher undertakes to advertise in the papers and up to the amount decided by the authors.

6. There should be a clause binding the publisher to send out a number of copies for review, and it should state that the number and the papers to which the copies are to be sent must be under the control of the author.

7. There should be an account clause by which accounts should be made up semi-annually, and rendered and paid within a month—or two at the outside—from the date to which they are made up. It is most important in the case of commission agreements that the accounting should be semi-annually, because the publisher is dealing with the author's capital and not merely paying the author a royalty.

8. There should be a clause indemnifying the publisher from infringement of copyright and libel. Such a clause, pending the alteration of the Law of Libel, has been settled between the Committee of the Society of Authors, etc., and the Publishers Association. Every author should obtain this clause if possible.

9. The author should of course be entitled to have any copies of the books handed over to him that he may desire, but in fairness to the publisher, he must be bound not to sell these copies and thereby spoil the publisher's market.

10. Lastly, there should be a clause by which either party can terminate the agreement after it has had a run of at least a year, by three months notice on either side. This clause may be varied to suit the special requisitions of any particular book.

When the Author has settled the estimate and knows what he wishes to spend in advertising and the financial terms of the contract, then he must consider carefully—if he desires the work to pay for its outlay—the price at which the book must be published. In order to settle this point he should work out a simple statement of account placing in the debit the cost of production, advertising and all other items against the book, and on the other side the probable number of the sales less the publisher's commission, working out the accounts till the sum realised on a fair average sale at a fixed price shows a reasonable profit.

Some authors desire to sell their books as cheap as possible. It is absolutely essential that these should put down the figures in detail and work out the financial result.

When the terms of the contract have been settled and the published price of the book ascertained, then comes the time when the contract can safely be signed.

SALE OF COPYRIGHT

It is necessary to state once and for all that no author should sell his copyright, but this warning is far more important to a writer of technical books or one who is a specialist in his subject than that to the writer of fiction. Technical works may need developing from day to day and year to year. It is essential for the reputation of the writer, that he should be in a position to alter his book as the subject with which he deals evolves. Quite apart from this argument, a writer who is a specialist, whether an Historian, a writer on Natural History or on any other subject, if he has been tempted to sell his copyright, may find that he is unable to write again on his own subject without infringing his own copyright. He may thus, by careless ignorance, deprive himself of a valuable source of income.

It not infrequently happens that publishers desiring to bring out a series, dealing with some special subject, write round to the leading authorities. They generally find one in twenty who in ignorance of the value of his property is ready to assign his copyright. The hook is then baited, and those authors who refuse are at once told that if Professor. . . . or Sir is willing to assign his copyright surely they cannot refuse. The publisher, taking advantage of the ignorance of one, succeeds in forcing the many into unsatisfactory agreements.

This example would not be worth quoting, if it did not occur frequently. The author should therefore take special care of his contract when he asked to contribute a book to a series. To limit the publisher to the license to publish in a special series is quite sufficient for the publisher's safeguard.

If a writer of fiction is thinking of selling his copyright, and he is sometimes tempted to do so by the Prizes which are offered by enterprising publishers, he should remember that the copyright covers dramatic and cinematograph rights, if he is being offered £500 for his property he may be selling property worth many thousands of pounds. If, however, he can obtain a figure sufficiently high, the offer might be sufficiently tempting to induce him to sell his copyright, but it should be made part of the contract that the book should be published within a certain time, and that his name should be attached to every copy sold. It is possible for a writer of fiction to know to some extent what is fair sum to take for his work if he has already placed on the market some 10 or 15 books. It is quite impossible for the writer of any technical subject to know what is a fair figure for his book as he certainly will never write 15 books dealing with the same subject.

THE PROFIT SHARING CONTRACT.

This form of contract is as a rule, from the author's point of view, very unsatisfactory, and there is no other form of contract so likely to raise disputes and dissatisfaction. If, however, for any special reason the author desires to adopt this method of placing his work before the public, it is as important for him to obtain full details of the cost of production and expenditure, as for those who have already set out to publish under the commission agreement. No serious business man would think of going into a quasi-partnership arrangement, without knowing the probable profits that will accrue to him ; and no author, therefore, going into a profit-sharing agreement, should do so without the fullest information. Unfortunately, in many cases, publishers refuse to give the necessary details stating that as they are responsible for the whole cost of production and expenses it is not a matter for the author's consideration ; surely no other business man would put forward a similar excuse. As in the commission agreement so under this agreement, it is most important that the author should know the price at which the sale of every copy is to be accounted under the agreement. He should also have some limited control over the amount spent in advertising.

One of the most difficult points to decide is what percentage on the cost of production the publisher is entitled to charge, to cover such items as Office expenses, clerks' time, travelling expenses, cataloguing, expenses, etc. For the guidance of Authors this is usually set down at 10%. Though it has been argued that if the publisher is entitled to charge a percentage under this heading, the author is also entitled to make some charge for working expenses incurred prior to placing the Ms. in the publisher's hands, this latter point is not usually included in profit sharing agreement. If the author is very anxious he can make a bargain either for a sum in advance of profits, which is not to be repaid in any event, or for a larger share of the profits when they come in.

It is understood in a profit sharing agreement that the publisher is responsible for all the costs. The usual share of profits is 50% to the publisher and 50% to the author. It will be seen that if an author enters into a profit sharing agreement without having the fullest details before him prior to the signing of the contract, the accounts may afford him an infinite number of queries. There is the cost of production, the amount spent in advertising. The amount charged for office expenses. The sale price of the book, and many other points. It is a form of contract which cannot be recommended. It had almost entirely ceased to find favour with publishers or authors until firms of such standing as Messrs. Macmillan & Co., and Messrs. Murray, brought forward a plea, since the War, that it was an equitable form of contract as between the parties. If the author when the accounts come in, does not understand them, and it is almost certain that he will not understand them, he at once becomes dissatisfied and discontented and suspicious, and either closes his mouth and accepts them and feels grieved with the publishers or begins to annoy the publisher by making meticulous queries about the details of publication. In either case the position is not satisfactory.

THE ROYALTY AGREEMENT.

This form of agreement is the simplest of all forms. The author receives a certain fixed percentage which he can easily verify on the published price of every copy sold. And it is essential for the sake of the author, and for the sake of the publisher, in the case where a business man is dealing with one who is ignorant of the law and business methods connected with his property, that simlicity should be the keynote of the contract. As this agreement is the most frequent and the most important for all authors it has been dealt with in full detail.

It has been thought advisable to give authors detailed advice on the different points that may crop up rather than draft a series of clauses which would have to be copiously annotated. The reason for this is that no Author should attempt to draft a legal document without proper assistance, and that in nearly all cases the publisher has a printed form of contract which he submits. With such a printed form before him it is much easier for the author to correct this document from these rules laid down and then if he had an annotated draft from which to work.

The contract should be a personal contract with a publisher or a publishing company and the parties should be so described at the commencement. Such words as administrators and assignees should be omitted.

1. In the first clause the author should grant an exclusive license to the publisher to produce the work in book form in the English language at the fixed price, and this clause should be further limited by country or by time or by both.

Note.—If the author is going to publish under a separate contract in America, he must add a clause by which his English publisher and his American publisher agree as to the date of publication in order that the copyright in neither country will be prejudiced. But the date must be controlled to such an extent by the author that if publication is unduly delayed, he can take the requisite action to compel publication.

If the author is going to obtain copyright in the United States, he must reserve that market for a separate contract. He should not allow his English publisher to negotiate the United States contract. Indeed, he should not allow the publisher in Great Britain to have any rights beyond the license for publication in book form. The limitation by time is sometimes dangerous because it has been decided in the Courts that a publisher who is bound by a time limit is entitled to sell after the time limit has expired, all the books which he has printed within that time limit. In consequence, he might render the time limit valueless by over-printing during the last years of the contract.

It is sometimes necessary in the case of technical books that the publisher should be limited to a certain edition in order that the writer on a technical subject may have the opportunity of revising the book if necessary. It is impossible, in a treatise of this kind, to settle every possible form of royalty publication. Special advice should be taken with regard to the publication of books of a technical nature.

The limitation of price for the first edition at any rate, is essential, because royalties are paid on the published price, and it is impossible to calculate whether the royalties are fair and reasonable until the published price has been fixed.

Sometimes it is important to give the publisher the right of producing at a certain price only as there are houses which can deal with the cheaper editions better than the publishers who deal with books at higher prices.

2. In the second clause the publisher, in consideration of the license, must undertake to produce and publish through all the ordinary trade channels, on or before a fixed date, an edition of a certain number of copies. If the form of the book is of importance to the Author, then the publisher should undertake in this clause to produce the work in form to be agreed between the Author and Publisher. The date is of considerable importance, not only if the author is going to publish in America, but, if he is making his living by writing, in order that the date may not conflict with any other contract and may place his book on the market at a reasonable interval after his previous work. At the present time (1921) it may be impossible to get the publisher to name a fixed date. There are only two courses open to the author.

1. To trust the publisher (for a legal document nothing should be left on trust).

2. To be in a position to cancel the contract if the book is not published by a fixed date.

3. The next clause generally deals with the amount paid in advance of royalties and the amount of the royalties that are paid. If a sum is paid in advance of royalties it should be paid by a fixed date. If the date of publication is fixed it should be paid on the date of publication. If the date of publication is not fixed, or may be delayed for some reason or other, then it should be paid on the date of publication or on a fixed date whichever shall first happen. The Royalties are of course paid on the Published price.

We do not deal in this present article, with books sold at a discount. They do not any longer exist for practical purposes. Perhaps, however, it would be as well to state a self-evident fact that a publisher gains much more on a net book on which he is paying 10% royalty, than on a book subject to discount or which he pays the same royalty, e.g. a 6/- book subject to discount is sold to the public at 4/6 and a 6/- net book is sold to the public at 6/-. The publisher has in each case to deduct a further sum for book-sellers profit. The royalties should commence from the first copy sold. Authors with large circulations can demand the highest royalties all through, but the minor authors generally take a royalty rising with the sales. In some cases the publisher pays a deferred royalty by which the Author does not receive a royalty till after the sale of a definite number of copies. When this is the case the Author should receive a proportionately higher royalty when his royalty does come in, for then he is guarding the publisher against a possible risk. The whole question of royalties is entirely a matter of bargaining. It is needless to remark that with the present high prices, it is not always possible to obtain royalties as high as those that used to be paid, for although the argument is put forward that the price of the book must be advanced to such an extent as will pay both the author and the publisher a fair profit, it must also be remembered that there is a limit in price beyond which the public will not buy. It is sometimes very difficult to discover what the limit is, but it is an economic law which must exist in all trades.

4. It is customary that the royalties are paid on books 13 as 12. Sometimes this rouses the author's suspicions as unfair profit to the publisher. But it is a fact that most novels are bought 13 as 12 or what the trade calls in mixed thirteens, that is 13 copies of different books from the same publisher will count as 12, so that in the end the result is the same. If, however, the book is of such a kind as to preclude the sale of 13 copies as 12, in that case, if the publisher insists, the author has merely to raise the royalty in proportion, or call off the bargain.

The question of contract in the sale of a book in a series has already been dealt with (p. 414). The same remarks would apply to a book under a royalty contract. Publishers not infrequently obtain the consent of one well known author and then turn round and force the other writers in the series down to the same level of royalty.

The subject of technical books has also been dealt with on p. 414, to which the reader should refer.

There is another subject which might be discussed here, that is the publication of Educational books. An Educational book, when it has once got on to the Education market as a standard work, has very often a much larger circulation than the most successful work of fiction and ought to be very a valuable property. Authors should be very careful, therefore, not only of the license they give to the publisher, but also of the royalties they receive.

5. After the usual royalty clause comes a clause dealing with the royalty on Colonial sales and as the publisher sells in sheets to the colonies, he generally pays the author a royalty on the net receipts. This, in the case of fiction ranges from 2d. to 6d. a copy in the case of other books must depend on the probable price of the sheets.

6. Next would follow a clause by which if the author is unsuccessful in obtaining the American copyright, the publisher is entitled to sell sheets to America. These are usually sold on the same basis as the sheets to the Colonies, at a very cheap rate. It is impossible to lay down any hard and fast rule as to the percentage that should be paid.

7. Clause 7 will follow the usual libel infringement clause. It is only fair that the publisher should be protected from libel and infringement of copyright. In many cases the author alone is able to know whether his book is libellous or a possible infringement, though under the present Law of Libel, it is impossible for an author to libel a person without having heard of him. In the circumstances the following clause is perhaps the best clause that can be arranged :—

The author hereby warrants to the publisher that the said work is in no way whatever a violation of any existing copyright and that it contains nothing obscene indecent or (with the intention of the author) libellous and will indemnify the publisher against any loss injury or damage, including any legal costs or expenses properly incurred, occasioned to or incurred by the publisher in consequence of any breach (unknown to the publisher) of this warranty. And it is hereby further agreed that in the following cases any loss, injury or damage (including any legal costs or expenses as aforesaid) occasioned to or incurred by either the author or the publisher or both, shall be contributed to and borne and paid by the author and the publisher in equal shares namely :—

1. Where any matter contained in the said work shall be held to constitute a libel upon a person to whom it shall appear the author did not intend to refer.

2. Where an unsuccessful action is brought in respect of an alleged libel contained in the said work, and

3. Where any proceedings are threatened instituted or prosecuted for any alleged libel contained in the said work and the claim is settled before judgment with the consent of the author and the publisher.

We have referred to this clause on page 413.

8. Next would follow a clause dealing with the license to publish cheap editions. If the author has granted to the publisher a license to publish at one price only, he certainly should protect the publisher by undertaking not to publish a cheap edition within say three years from the date of first publication at the price named. He should also undertake not to publish an abridgement of the work in book form. If the author has given a wider license then the cheap edition clause must deal with the time when the cheap edition should be issued. What constitutes in price and format a cheap edition and a power by which the cheap edition rights or licenses return to the author if the publisher has not exercised them by a fixed date.

9. Accounts should be rendered semi annually, made up to a certain date and delivered and paid within two months of such date. It is only fair to the big publishing houses to give them a reasonable time in which the auditors can settle up the affairs and have everything ready for delivery.

10. The remainder sale is the sale of the balance of the stock after the regular sales of a book have practically ceased. A publisher should not be allowed to remainder without the author's sanction, within two years from the date of first publication, and the author should have the first option of purchase of the remainder at remainder prices.

This is of importance because it might be the desire of the author to publish a revised edition of the work. He would have some difficulty in obtaining a fresh publisher if there was a large amount of remainder stock on the market.

11. The next clause should deal with the corrections and revision of proofs. The author is generally allowed free corrections to the extent either of a certain amount per sheet or of a certain percentage of the cost of composition. Anything beyond that he would have to pay himself as it is not fair that the publisher should have to bear the expenses of a heavy revision. 5/- per sheet of 16 pages is a low figure and 15% of the cost of composition is also unreasonably low.

12. The publication of the name or pseudonym of the author should be the subject of the next clause. How it is to be produced in advertisements and in the book. This is of considerable importance as sometimes an author is unwilling that his real name should be advertised. Sometimes even he desires that his name should not appear at all. Great difficulties have arisen from time to time owing to the fact that an author in his youth has sold rights in a story which perhaps has appeared anonymously or under a pseudonym. In subsequent years he makes his name and is suddenly astonished to find the old story republished under his real name or his fresh pseudonym. Such action might seriously damage his credit as the critics and the public might think the story was a new one from the author's pen. There are some authors like Mr. William Sharpe, who used to write under his own name and also under a pseudonym. If Mr. Sharpe had not made special contracts he might have found himself in great difficulties. The point, if overlooked through carelessness by the author, may lead to disastrous results.

13. Review copies. In a book published on the royalty basis, the number of copies sent out for review are usually left to the judgment of the publisher, as also the papers to which they are sent. But if the author is meticulous on the point he should insert a clause which should limit the publisher both as to the number and as to the papers.

The next clause should be the termination clause. This is a most important clause and should run as follows :—

"If at any time the publishers allow the work to go out of print or off the market, and if within three months after notice in writing from the author they have not reprinted and placed on the market a further edition of at least 500 copies, then and in that case the author shall have power to terminate the agreement by notice in writing."

No author should convey any of the rights which he holds under the Copyright Law, in perpetuity. An author's work is so personal that he should, while he is alive, keep control of it, and should always be in a position, if the work is not being dealt with according to his wishes, to be able to recall it back to his own protection. For the same reason, if anything should happen to the publishing firm with which he is dealing, he should be able to cancel the agreement and the following clause is recommended :—

"Should the publishers at any time by themselves or any one acting on their behalf wilfully fail to fulfil or comply with any of the conditions accepted by them in this agreement (save with the written consent of the author) or should they retire from business or commit an act of bankruptcy the license to print and publish contained in clause of this agreement shall thereupon determine and the author be free to license any other person to print and publish notwithstanding anything to the contrary contained or implied in any part of this agreement."

Before closing it is necessary to make some remarks with regard to clauses which publishers are trying with not indifferent success, to push into their agreements. It is impossible to warn the author against all such clauses but two of the worst are given as examples.

The first is the clause by which they are allowed control over marketing some of the minor rights, or what they choose to call minor rights, such as dramatic rights, cinematograph rights, serial rights, translations, right etc. No author should allow the publisher to have any control over the minor rights. If, however, through the introduction of the publisher any of the rights happen to be sold under a contract signed by the author, he should pay the publisher usual agents fee ; but in some of the printed agreement issued from the houses of well-known publishers, the publisher asks for anything between 25/- and 50% of the returns, whether the contract is negotiated to make contracts. These are often quite independent through his introduction or not, and sometimes even demands a license of the prices that are paid in the literary markets. It is nothing to him if he is underselling authors generally, as long as he makes in addition to what he thought he could make by the sale of the book, £50, £100 or even £200.

The Minor rights clause is a bad clause, but there is a worse clause, which enters into a good many publishers' contracts at the present time, that is the future book clause by which the publisher tries to bind the author for future books. The publisher's excuse for this is that he cannot afford to put a large amount of capital into advertising one book unless he sees some way of getting it back through the subsequent books. It is not infrequently the case, however, that when the publisher has prevailed upon the author to sign the clause by appealing to his sense of fairness, he does not care about pushing the work as he knows that he is sure of future books. If the author by chance should say " I will give you my second or even my third book if you will undertake to advertise this book up to the extent of £ . . ." he will most probably be met with an astonished stare by the publisher on account of his audacity. It is not so much the principle of binding the author for other books that is objectionable if the author is sufficiently safeguarded, as binding him by fixed and wholly inadequate terms. The author, therefore should counter the publisher's suggestion by some alternative arrangement under which the publisher should only have the offer of the second book if he can show that he has advertised the first up to a fixed substantial figure, or that the sales of the first book amount to a given number. The author should see that a clause properly drafted is inserted to this effect.

TO TRANSLATE THE WORK.

These rights are generally limited to a certain language, but also sometimes to a certain country or set of countries. An author must be very careful, when he grants translation rights of the following points :—

(a) That the work should be limited to book and serial publication.

(b) That the author's name is to be attached to every copy.

(c) That the publication shall be made on or before a fixed date.

(d) That if the work is not marketed by a fixed time the contract is cancelled.

(e) If the author has full knowledge of the language in which his book is going to be translated that, he has power if he desires to approve the translation before it is put on the market.

Then comes the question of remuneration. The first thing for the author to remember is that the translator will have to be paid for his translation. The remuneration the author receives is in many cases a lump sum. This is a common form owing to the difficulty of collecting royalties in a foreign country. It is important therefore, that the sum should be a fair remuneration. In the past it would seem that translation rights have been considerably underpaid. This information is obtained from many statements received from foreign countries.

If the work in translated form is published serially the author should in addition to the lump sum be entitled to 50% of the issue in serial form.

If he receives a royalty he should in all cases receive a substantial sum in advance of royalties owing to the difficulty already mentioned of collecting royalties ; and in those cases where he retains a continuous interest, have some right of approval of the contract entered into.

TO USE THE WORK IN SERIAL FORM.

Publication in serial form is sometimes difficult to arrange as the serial stories in many of the popular magazines have to be written in a style quite different from the ordinary novel. The author should also, in the case of serial publication be very careful of his contract. It is quite sufficient if the author grants to the editor the first serial use of his article or of his story and obtains an undertaking that it should be published within a certain date with his name or pseudonym, or without his name, attached, according to his special desire. The author who sends an article to a magazine without some proposal as to the rights he offers for sale, makes a mistake. If the author omits to send such a proposal he may find himself in great difficulties afterwards. The proposal should run somewhat as follows :—

" I beg to offer you the first serial use in your magazine (or paper) of (here insert title of Ms.) of . . . words in length."

It is sometimes as well even to add the price per thousand words which he demands. If the article or story is then published without any variation in the contract by the Editor, it will be taken to be published on the terms set out in the author's letter. It is, therefore, very important that the author should send out a regular stereotyped letter or keep a copy of every letter sent out with every article. It is necessary to emphasise the fact that many editors are exceedingly unbusinesslike with regard to their contracts.

From the legal standpoint the author is entitled to his money as soon as the article or story is accepted. But some magazines state that they do not pay until the work is published, and some magazines only make quarterly payments. This is all very unsatisfactory and it would be a great advantage if editors, could come together and adopt some uniform method of conducting their business. If the work is to be paid for on publication, publication or payment must be made within a reasonable time. It would be a good thing for all parties if the ideal uniform arrangements the work was paid for within a certain from acceptance or immediately after publication, whichever event should first happen

Authors must not allow indefinite contracts to pass in the fear of annoying an editor. Editors are not easily annoyed and as a general rule prefer to deal with an author who understands his business. Authors must, however, be warned against a much more serious form of imposition which is used, unfortunately, by some very important publishers and proprietors of magazines and papers. It will be best perhaps to explain the difficulty by an example.

An author sends in his work to an editor without setting out any special terms in his original letter. The editor accepts the work and publishes it without any special terms, or in some cases publishes the work without any definite acceptance. In these circumstances the author would legally have transferred the first serial use of his work to the editor or proprietor. What is his astonishment when he received a cheque purporting to assign his copyright to the Company? It may be frankly stated that the copyright is a little or no use to the Company but is a great importance to the author. But the author, either through ignorance, or through an urgent need of the money, signs the cheque and seals his fate. If he signs it with full knowledge it is because he does not care to fight a big Company for fear he should lose a chance of placing further work in the same direction. The Company, therefore, has taken advantage of the author's position in order to force him to give up property which he never intended to convey. This is certainly unfair to the author and (to use a mild term) undignified, from the point of view of the Company.

SECOND SERIAL USE.

One reason why it is of such importance that authors should not sell their serial rights without limitation, but should only grant the first serial use lies in the fact that certain Syndicates of companies purchase the second serial use of authors' Mss. These Syndicates can place second serial use in Provincial papers, in Colonial papers, and to some extent in American papers. The prices they get per thousand words is small but as they sell to a large number of papers at a small rate they reap a good return for themselves. Authors, therefore, who know the market, can in some cases obtain quite a high figure when they grant the license for the second serial use. But, they should never grant this license without limitation of time. The time limit should vary, but from three to five years would be quite sufficient. An author should be quite as careful of the clauses in his contract for second serial use as for first serial use and is referred to the former paragraph.

AGENTS.

There are all kinds of agents, from the gentleman with one small room which is generally locked, to the big Literary clearing house with a large staff and no personality. There are the two extremes, and between these extremes there are numberless varieties. The true agent must stand in a very confidential and personal position; but as there is nothing to prevent anyone starting an agency whether he has had any knowledge of the higher technical contracts connected with the business, or whether he has made any study of that very difficult question, Copyright Law, Domestic and International, all authors should be exceedingly careful of the agents with which they deal, and no author should deal with an agent unless he has special information as to the agent's position and capacity.

To those authors there are many incapable of understanding the business details of their profession. To those who are unwilling to master them; to those authors who are too busy in their work to have time to market it; to those authors who live abroad or are constantly travelling and are not in a position to market their work, to those; Agents are absolutely essential and it is for them to try and find the right agent for his work. It is best to have a contract with an agent, but it is possible though unsatisfactory, to work with an agent without a written agreement.

If an author has a contract with an agent it should set out :—

(Clause 1.) That he appoints the agent as his sole agent subject to certain limitations. These limitations may be as to certain markets, limitations as to time, or limitations as to a certain kind of work. If an author has been dealing with a certain publisher or a certain editor regularly himself, he may not desire his agent to deal with the same publisher or the same editor. If this is inserted in the agreement it is a limitation as to market. He may desire an agent to act for a certain time, for six months, or perhaps during his absence abroad. This is a time limitation and should be inserted in the agreement. In any case the agent should be entitled to a fair limit to test his capacity say six months, and the author should be able to terminate the agency by three months notice at the longest. If an agent is unable to place an author's work, it is wholly absurd that the author should be bound as in some cases to give twelve months notice. It is neither fair to the author nor to the agent. In some cases an author will only put a definite piece of work into an agent's hands. This limitation should also be carefully set out.

If an agent is appointed then subject to the limitation mentioned he should have control of all the author's out-put for a fixed period. It is dangerous for an author to try and place his work himself when an agent is also endeavouring to market it. The result may be that the two will be competing in the same market and the author may lose a good bargain.

(Clause 2). No agent should be allowed in any circumstances to enter into a contract of any kind without the author's approval and signature.

An agent as a general rule (Clause 3) collects monies on any contract made during the period of his agency, but the author should have the right to terminate this power of collection should he desire to do so as otherwise it is possible he may find himself in difficulties.

The amount that should be paid an agent as percentage should also be fixed. This amount varies, in ordinary cases between 10% and 15% on the amount received under the contract. The Author should remember that the bigger his reputation and the larger the sums he receives, the easier it is for the agent to place the work, and therefore the percentage should be less. In some cases it has been as low as 2½% and in cases where the contract is likely to continue for a long series of years, it might be necessary to limit the amount of the agent's commission to a fixed sum. It is unreasonable that the Author should be bound to pay his agent 10% for a period which may extend over the author's life and fifty years, and may amount to many hundreds of pounds. When the fixed sum has been reached the Author might, and possibly would desire the agent to continue the collection, when the author should allow the agent a small percentage for the trouble of collecting and accounting.

But there should be a clause by which he can terminate the power of collecting by a reasonable notice or in any event in case the agent breaks any of the clauses of the agreement, or dies, or becomes bankrupt.

The clauses referring to the right of the author to determine the agent's power of collection are very important clauses and under this heading the author should be especially warned against signing an agreement with a publisher containing a clause by which the agent is appointed collector for the author. Such a clause is irrevocable as between the publisher and the author. If an agent, therefore, inserts such a clause, he is not acting up to his duty towards the author. In any case he should give the Author full details of its dangers.

It should not be necessary to warn authors that it is the agent's duty to explain fully the difficulties and dangers surrounding all the terms of the contract which he may set before an author from a publisher or an Editor, if the agent himself did not often neglect to do so.

There are certain forms of contract which bring considerable advantage to agents which in some cases maybe disastrous to the authors. Some details of these clauses and contracts are set fully out as authors should be very chary about signing contracts which contain these clauses.

1. To bind an author for future books is one of the simplest clauses for an agent's benefit, as he is thereby drawing in 10% on future works without any trouble and bother in placing the work, conducting negotiations and completing a new contract. To some authors such a clause is a hopeless enslavement as they may find themselves attached to an unsympathetic or worthless publisher.

2. A clause which concedes any of the minor rights to a publisher is a dangerous clause. These rights should of course be placed by the agent. If they are placed in the hands of the Publisher sometimes the Publisher himself employs an agent. If he does not do so the author has to pay two agency fees, one to the publisher and one to the original agent. Even if an agent should recommend that these rights should be handed over to the publisher the advice should be disregarded.

3. Any offer which it is necessary to accept by cable, telegram or telephone should be avoided. To many authors the financial side of a contract is the least important and even if at the moment it may seem most important, it is almost certain that subsequently the author will discover his altered opinion.

There is no doubt that a great majority of authors are unable to deal with their own work and market it successfully. In consequence the middleman and the agent has sprung up and constant care is most essential. Any author who approaches a publisher holds him at arms length while the agreement is being discussed, but the agent should be a confidential adviser.

POSTAL RATES

(In force at the time of press.)

LETTER POST. Inland.—Not exceeding 3oz. 2d, with an extra $\frac{1}{2}$ d. for every additional ounce or part thereof.

Foreign. —To all destination in British Possessions and the U.S.A. 2d. for the 1st oz and 1d. for each succeeding oz. To foreign countries the rate remains at $2\frac{1}{2}$ d. per oz. but is due for revision to 5d. per oz. after the International Conference.

POSTCARDS. At home and abroad 1d.

PRINTED PAPER RATE. Much money can be saved in sending out Ms. by using the printed paper rate and clearly marking your envelope "Printed Paper Rate," and by enclosing inside a stamped $\frac{1}{2}$ d. envelope similarly stamped. The use of a Rubber stamp "Printed Paper Rate" is useful and well repays its cost.

INLAND PRINTED PAPER RATE.

The prepaid rate of postage on Printed Papers is :—

Not exceeding 1 oz. in weight	$\frac{1}{2}$ d.
Exceeding 1 oz. but not exceeding 2 oz. in weight ...	1d.
„ 2 oz. „ „ „ 4 oz. „ ...	$1\frac{1}{2}$ d.
„ 4 oz. „ „ „ 6 oz. „ ...	2d.

and so on at the rate of $\frac{1}{2}$ d. for every subsequent 2 oz. or fraction of 2 oz. up to 2 lb. The rate for 1 lb. will be $4\frac{1}{2}$ d. and for 2 lb. $8\frac{1}{2}$ d.

No Printed Paper may exceed 2 lb. in weight. The only limit of size applicable is that applicable to letters.

The Printed Paper Rate is not intended for samples or for goods, and anything which is sent at the rate must fall clearly within the following definition.

The expression "Printed Paper" means a packet not exceeding 2lb. in weight which consists of, or contains one or more of, the following articles or documents, that is to say :—

(a) Books and other publications or works of a literary character, whether containing written dedications or not and any other written or printed matter not being in the nature of a letter (on paper or on some substance ordinarily used for writing or printing).

(b) Sketches, drawings, paintings, photographic prints, and engravings on paper or on some substance ordinarily used for the purpose, provided that it is not a brittle or exceptionally fragile substance.

(c) Maps, plans and charts, on paper or some other substance ordinarily used for the purpose, provided it is not a brittle or exceptionally fragile substance.

(d) The binding or mounting of any article hereinbefore described, provided such binding or mounting be of a kind ordinary used for the purpose, be not made of glass or any brittle or exceptionally fragile substance, and be transmitted in the same packet with the article.

There are a number of documents, whether containing matter in the nature of a letter or not, which, provided they respectively conform to the prescribed conditions; can be sent at the Inland Paper Rate and the P.O. Guide should be consulted for these.

NEWSPAPER RATE.

Publications, registered for transmission at the Inland Newspaper rate, charged 1*d.* for every copy not exceeding 6 oz. in weight with a further charge of $\frac{1}{2}$ d. for every additional 6 oz. or fraction of 6 oz. up to a maximum of 2lb.

AIR MAIL SERVICES.

Correspondence may be posted in the United Kingdom for transmission by air from London to Paris, Brussels or Amsterdam. There are at present a morning and an afternoon service to Paris every weekday and an afternoon service to both Brussels and Amsterdam. Correspondence for Morocco may also be posted for transmission by air from Toulouse to Rabat. Air Mails are also received daily in London from France, Belgium and Holland.

On all Air Mail correspondence a special air fee is charged, in addition to the ordinary foreign postage and registration fee (when payable). The air fee is 2*d.* per ounce in the services to Paris and Brussels, and 3*d.* per ounce in the service to Amsterdam, and must be prepaid by means of postage stamps affixed to the top right-hand corner of the cover.

All correspondence intended for the Air Mails should bear in the top left-hand corner a special blue label bearing the words “By Air Mail.” Further particulars can be had at any Post Office.

SOME THOUGHTS ON SELLING MSS

Literature has been variously defined as "better than horse-racing," and has been referred to as "an excellent crutch" whilst to the number of authors who make a fortune—they can be counted on one's fingers—there are thousands who are just making ends meet. It is peculiar that the failures amongst authors are few—very few indeed reach the bankruptcy court, though that may be on account of the eternal hope which inspires a writer—or artist—that something will turn up—someday.

There is always some attraction about "writing for the press"—as witness the number of correspondence colleges that want to teach your journalism, but one's connection with the profession for over twenty years, and a reader of budding author's MSS. for the last ten—as nature old age creeps on, one inclines more and more to the view that the true author, journalist and writer is born and never turned out of a Correspondence school at so much for so many lessons. At the same time it is quite possible for a mediocre person to be turned into a brilliant statish under the able instruction of the leading lights of these Correspondence Schools but a great deal of convincing would be necessary to make one believe that the ability to pull a subject to pieces and then build it up for presentation in such a way as the modern press demands can be anything but an inborn gift. The journalistic touch is the resultant of experience and brain power. With the latter you unconsciously acquire the former. Without the latter you will for ever grope for words, and the true journalist never sticks for words or phrases and he knows instantaneously how he will present his story to his readers. Therefore to the many many thousands who think they can write the advice of an old hand is don't.

Still if you will persist the following suggestions may be helpful and many by using all the brain power you have and can still help you to earn your living by clicking a typewriter or filling aountain pen.

THE MAKING OF THE MSS.

Before we can sell a thing we must make it. And to sell it we must make it perfectly. Therefore a thorough grounding in Grammar, the science of expression and the Art of Writing must be mastered. Any good modern English grammar will give this and you don't need a teacher for help, unless you are an infant prodigy but there are few books to compare with Nesfield's English Grammar (Macmillan). Particular attention to punctuation and paragraphing is desirable—and we use shorter paragraphs in these days than before the war—and the end in view should never be lost sight of. For newspaper work or periodical work you want emphasis. Make your punctuation marks put grip into your writing

Like any other piece of work a Mss. should be constructed on scientific lines. It is no use building a house and leaving the staircase out, nor forgetting to put a few chimney breasts in, neither is it much use writing a Mss. without working out its plan of construction first. One needs to be able to dissect the things written about: to present them in their true bearings: and to harness one's imagination that it will work along correct lines. To this end study logic. It is not necessary to become an expert logician. It is a wonderful help and Jevon's Elementary Logic (Macmillan) is all that is necessary. If one half of that book is understood by an aspirant for an editorial chair, he will be well on the road to writing saleable matter. After all, it is the saleability of the writing that tells: a man may write most wonderful English but never sell a Mss., and in the world of today—outside of learned professors and technologists—there is no room for him.

Essential outstanding features of a Mss. should be kept well in mind: (1) a flowing style, which must come from scientific use of words and phrases, a scientific groundwork and plenty of practice: (2) It should be the best that the writer can turn out: (3) It should be sent in a business-likeway—and the author is here particularly referred to the article on Literary Propriety in this book and (4) it should be judged solely by its chances of saleability.

CHOICE OF PURCHASERS.

An author would do well to remember that he is offering goods to a purchaser, and it is the one who pays the piper that can call the tune. Too many authors are discouraged because Editor's don't buy what they think they ought to print. The editor is simply in the position of a business manager, buying what goods he knows he can sell. It is not one atom of use to expect the Editor of the Christian World, or the Church Times to buy an articles on "Bed-room scenes in American Films," or to ask the Editor of a Technical paper to purchase the rights in an article on "Why Grasshoppers hop." They will both come back with a rejection slip.

There are four essentials to be observed if you want to give your best work a decent chance. First, let it read easily, and put the most salient facts at the beginning, not at the end, for if an Editor finds the beginning padded and uninteresting it is useless to him. He has many readers who only read the first ten lines, and he must cater for them: 2nd. Use good judgment: send Mss. to a paper that they will suit—it may mean you will have to study all the papers carefully on the subjects on which you are interested and it is far better to devote a month to getting to know the requirements of every editor you can write for than to spend five years trying to persuade an Editor to buy stuff you write for him. Thirdly get your Mss. in to him, either first or last. The true journalist is first: the collector of odds and ends of interesting titbits bearing on a big subject usually gets there last, but he gets his copy taken, because he has grouped together all that which the other men left out. He has the last word on the subject. Fourthly, give your Mss. as many chances as possible and if it is topical don't make any bones about telling an editor so, and asking him to return it immediately if he can't use it. He will appreciate it all the more if he thinks he is likely to see it in a rival newspaper and he regard's it in exactly the same way as the fashionable young lady does the "model" hat in a Bond Street shop. The chance of losing always spurs one on to buy. Seriously, the article is topical: its value will vanish in a few days, and a courteous request for a prompt decision—accompanied by a stamped return envelope—will usually be courteously attended to by the occupant of an editorial chair. Always consider every possible source of purchaser for every Mss. and see that they get their chance of buying it.

A sense of humour invariably helps one through the grind of keeping the "pot" boiling. Editors appreciate it if it is good, and not too obvious, but a cheerful Mss. has a better chance of sale than a gloomy one, and a spirit of hopefulness and brightness will open many doors. If you can infuse cheerfulness into your Mss. they will sell much better.

THE SALE OF THE MSS.

Assuming an editor has accepted a Mss. the author must put himself in the place of a business man selling marketable goods. No better advice can be given here than to consult the section on Literary Property which appears in this volume and to study it carefully. It contains much useful knowledge for an author when it comes to the business side of the transaction and should be followed. It will help the amateur as well as the professional. With regard to the question of haggling over the price paid by an Editor for a Mss. that problem—like the profiteer—will be always with us, and it is a matter of extreme difficulty to offer any suggestions on the point. The average author is generally so—"damnably glad" as Lord Fisher would have said—to get an offer at all that he scarcely thinks about whether he is receiving proper remuneration. He should look at the question rather from the point of view of others—Is he underselling them? From twenty years experience in press and journalistic work one cannot honestly say that editors and publishers try to buy as cheaply as they can. At the same time the cheap-jack does exist and until we have a published scale of contributors' payments from each and every journal—or a private black list for confidential circulation—the author must trust that he is paid scale rates. He should always ask for them and a subtle question or two will usually elicit the desired information. If he is in doubt a courteous letter will usually be answered and severe treatment can be meted out when the author has achieved a more prominent position. Established Journals always pay reasonably well, and the recent activities of the Institute of Journalists, the National Union of Journalists and the Society of Authors are bringing about a better rate of remuneration. The economic law of supply and demand operates in the literary world as well as any other business world and provided that the author is recompensed for his labour, and is clear that he is selling his first serial rights only he has not much to lose. Courtesy will always pay and a little firmness will usually win the day if there is any attempt at any underhanded work.

THE AUTHOR AS A BUSINESS MAN

Authors, journalists and artists are traditionally bad business men, and there is really no reason why they should be, as by the very nature of their calling they must give attention to detail. And that is all business consists of.

It has been suggested that some simple system of accounts and record-keeping would be of assistance to the users of the Literary Year Book, and that outlined in the following pages has had the merits of being used for a number of years.

Let us assume that the author has written his Mss. and to the journalist a system is even more important than to the novelist, as the former must be continually producing, whilst the latter perhaps writes only two or three novels a year. To journalists therefore this system of accounting and recording will be more valuable.

ACCOUNTS.

A record should be kept of all business expenditure. A rough book is all that is necessary first to jot down miscellaneous expenditure and at the end of the month this can be easily classified and the various items of expenditure analysed under various heads, such as Stamps, Papers, Notepaper, Envelopes, Wrappers and so forth. With regard to receipts it is really only necessary to keep a numbered receipt book and to give a receipt for everything, whether it be a shilling or a £100 cheque and to pay all cash into the bank. Conservatively all payments must be made by Cheque and money for living and petty cash secured through "self" Cheques.

An account book is necessary in which one side is kept for Payments In and the other for Payments Out. To arrive at the exact financial position at the end of any month all that is necessary is to add up both sides, together with the cash in the bank on the 1st of the month on the credit side and the cash in the bank on the last day of the month on the other side. The actual cash in the bank at the end of the month shows the exact position.

There are however one or two possibilities not provided for, so we will retrace our steps to the finished Mss.

RECORD OF MSS. SENT OUT.

It is very advisable for a journalist to keep a record of the Mss. he sends out and where he sends them to. An ordinary 3in. by 4½in. is quite suitable for this purpose, headed with the name of the Mss., and with a rule down the left-hand side of ½in. for the date sent out the remainder of the space can be used for the name of the paper or periodical to which it is sent. A finished card would appear thus :

SUBMARINE : What they are, how they work.

Dec. 10.	Boys Own Paper.	Ret'd.
Dec. 14.	Cassell's Saturday Journal and so on.	Acc'p.

In this way an accurate record can be kept of where each Mss. is, and if it is declined it can be marked off on the right-hand side as returned.

When a Mss. has been accepted it should be re-booked in a Daily Entry Book which can take the place of the ordinary goods sold book in a factory or ordinary business house. Under the date of December 14th this Mss. would appear somewhat as follows :—

Dec. 14.	Cassell's Saturday Journal
	Submarines.....£3 3s. od.

A cash column on the far side of the page could be utilised for the amount received when payment is made. If however the purchasing journal is one which requires accounts from its contributors this book gives at a glance all the necessary details from which accounts can be compiled. By keeping a carbon copy of every account sent out a writer can, at the end of the month gauge to a fair extent the amount of money owing to him, and if payment is made quickly he can mark the account copy paid and file it away. If it isn't he can send a reminder in the middle of the following month with a further account at the end of the month. If he doesn't secure payment then a strong letter should be sent to the Editor with a polite mention that the matter will be put in the hands of the Society of Authors for collection, if he happens to be a member of that very useful body.

Another record book which is also useful in making up accounts in where the Mss. sent out each day are entered under the names of the papers, and then it is possible to make up your accounts accurately and quickly each month. An ordinary plain ruled book will do for this purpose and a proposed heading would run thus :—

Date.	Name of Mss.	Sent to.	Decisions.	Amount.
-------	--------------	----------	------------	---------

In this way a check record is kept on the Daily Entry Book.

Naturally with a large connection other books, such as a Ledger will be required so that amounts of accounts rendered and payments made can be seen at a glance and also the amount still owing.

Publishers and newspaper proprietors are quite human and they will appreciate some effort at systematisation on the part of their contributors, but the records should be so faultlessly kept—and it only involves a small amount of time each day, that they are indisputable.

Instead of using rejection slips to light cigarettes and pipes they should be carefully kept, with the name of the Mss. which they accompany carefully written on them, so that they can be marked off in the Mss. Record book mentioned above.

THE RETURNED MSS.

The Returned Mss. is always a bugbear. It by no means follows that it is useless, for some of the most successful Mss. have been built up from the "rejecteds," and therefore some system of keeping Mss. is very necessary. With a large output a special clerk is really necessary but the following system is useful for the ordinary writer.

As each Mss. is done make out an index card for it, and file each days in alphabetical order. An old envelope box with a larger sized card for guide cards, i.e. cards with A, B, C, &c., on a projecting slip on each one, makes quite a good index cabinet. Corresponding to each letter of the alphabet keep a folder similarly lettered in the same order. Taking a concrete case: A Mss. "Aviation as a Sport," would be on an Index Card indexed under "A" and the Mss. or a copy of it would be in the folder A. It is sent out half-a-dozen times and returns to roost as the writer thinks it might have a rest. The card is marked off as "Ret'd" opposite each paper to which it has been sent and it is in its place when he wants it. Of course a batch of returns can be dealt with all at once, rather than singly but it very advisable to have a system and stick to it.

THE KEY.

The key of this system is that you have down in black and white what has happened to everything. You can tell of a Mss. is out, where it went, when it went, and all about it. You know your receipts and expenditure, and if you follow your Bank-Book and leave it at the Bank to be written up each week you will always know at the week-end whether you can afford a Sunday joint or whether you can't. A further hint is that when your Bank Balance is £100 or more, you can go to your Bank Manager and ask him what interest he will allow if you leave this amount with him for so many months at say 7 or 14 days withdrawal notice and you will probably find he will be glad to allow you an extra per centage for the use of your money.

Again you can arrive very quickly at your earnings in a year so that when the Income Tax Collector makes his appearance and if he should dispute your figures you have a black and white statement carefully compiled to show him that your figures are correct. One word in this respect ; if you will tell a Tax Collector your position frankly, your difficulties, bad debts and expenses necessary to your profession, he will usually be found quite a helpful person and not as he is usually pictured grasping and inquisitorial.

Good business is only attention to detail and it is much more satisfactory to know where you do stand than whether you are compelled to seek relief in an institution next week or next month. This very simple system will show you the way out.

SOME HINTS FOR CONTRIBUTORS.

If you are submitting a Mss. to an Editor, remember he is generally overwhelmed with matter, and consider him as much as you can. There are no rules to be observed except those of courtesy but the following hints are based on accepted practice in the literary world of to-day :

1. All Mss. should be typewritten. This should be well done and free from all errors. Handwritten copy will be accepted but the typed matter is much easier. A quarto sheet is quite large enough. In fact a 6mo. is better as it fits on the compositor's table much better, and he isn't overburdened with space.
2. Needless to say only one side of the paper must be written on.
3. Send a letter with your Mss. but see that your name and address is on the first sheet of each Mss., and if you want it back enclose a stamped addressed envelope. You can get your Mss. back for a ½d. if you stamp your envelope "Printed Paper Rate."
4. Use discretion in submitting your Mss. and study the particular needs of each publication. Where a publication takes very little outside matter send a preliminary letter (P.L. in classified Lists) first.
5. It is important to send your Mss. to "The Editor" and not to any particular individual. Where a Publishing house issues more than one publication ask for it is to be considered by all Editors. Be sure you get the correct address of the publication—Don't always accept the address in any lists, as Editors of Books such as this can't be held responsible for such errors. Every care is taken to ensure correct addresses but it is not always possible to do so.
6. Read carefully through the section on "Literary Property" before you send out a Mss. if you are a beginner at journalism and literature.
7. Don't write asking Editors for interviews when you just start to write. If an Editor wants to see you he will ask you quickly enough.

8. Make up your own list of names and addresses : they are so useful and save constant turning up when your connexion is growing. An ordinary indexed Note-Book will easily supply the form.
9. Keep a record of all Mss. you send out and where you send them—See the article on “ The Author as a Business Man.”
10. Remember that it is the best work which sells : the success of an author or journalist is measured by the amount of brains he possesses ; the quickness with which he turns out his work : its accuracy and how far it meets the requirements of an Editor. The Editor is the purchaser and the payer and is therefore entitled to call the tune.

Any help that the Editor of this book can give to journalists and writers with regard to special markets will be gladly sent to any correspondent if a stamped addressed envelope is enclosed.

CLASSIFIED LIST OF PERIODICALS

To attempt to provide for the varying needs of authors and journalists with regard to the matter which they can sell to periodicals, newspapers and publishers and arrange it in a form which will suit each individual, is impossible, and therefore this year an attempt has been made to group together in various sections the papers and periodicals published in the British Isles, Colonies and America, which are of some use to the writer

It should be a cardinal rule amongst authors and journalists to study a publication before they send Mss. to its editor, and by a careful study of what Editors use, they secure the knowledge of what editors want : but requirements change from week to week, and therefore in the case of doubt an author should drop a note, enclosing an addressed stamped envelope, asking whether he can submit such-and-such a Mss. for consideration. Almost invariably these requests will be dealt with courteously.

The matter given in the following classifications is such that an author can easily make out a special list for himself and this is the object with which this matter has been arranged this year. There are the main headings of British, Colonial and American papers, and the British periodicals are subdivided into eight classifications: (1) Trades (2) Professional (3) Educational, Music and Literary (4) Political, Social and Official (5) Religious (6) Sports, Pastimes, Athletics Hobbies and Pets (7) Fashion and (8) Fiction. A list of Daily and Evening Newspaper is included and it can be taken that all these are open to accept interesting matter.

The Colonial and American papers are arranged in alphabetical order but the List is by no means exhaustive. The Editor wishes to inform the users of this work that he will supply, on request, names and addresses of any papers authors and writers are seeking and help them to compile their own classified lists if asked to do so.

Authors are requested to assist in keeping this list up to date by sending any items of information they gain as to editor's requirements, decrease of journals : new journals, and the like.

EDITOR.

Divided into Sections as follows :—(1) Trades : (2) Professional : (3) Educational, Music and Literary ; (4) Political, Social and Official ; (5) Religious (6) Sports, Pastimes, Athletics, Hobbies and Pets ; (7) Fashion and Miscellaneous ; (8) Fiction.

P.L.—Send Preliminary Letter making suggestions.

T.P.—Trade Paper, accepting mostly news, trade and technical articles.

WHAT KIND OF STORIES DO EDITORS NEED?

A PLEA FOR SPECIFIC REQUIREMENTS.

The success of the two large business publications in this country has been built up by the Editors stating specifically—and in detail—to their correspondents and contributors—what kind of Mss. they need for each Issue. These Magazine are monthly publications going to press only a few days—perhaps 10-14—before they are distributed. Editors confer with their contributors and at a round table Conference outline a plan of each number and its succeeding one. As a result of this the contributors know to what subject to devote their energies and attention and they do very little unremunerative work.

A correspondent has written to the Editor asking whether it would not have been possible to arrange the Classified Publications Directory in a form that would state specifically what British and American Fiction Editors want. It is possible in the case of American periodicals, but time has prevented the appearance of this feature for 1921. In the 1922 Edition the American Classified Periodical List will be helpful in this respect. The British Editor may possibly help: but in nine cases out of ten he rarely knows what he wants except "a good story." After all, it is not how to submit a Mss. which is the important point to an author, but where he can sell it. If Editors would state precisely what they mean, according to the policy of their paper, what particular degree of domesticity they require for a "domestic story," the path of earning a livelihood by writing would be much simpler. A study of the numerous fiction papers will help, but as Authors, who cannot turn out stories like a stamping machine turns out tin cans, by the time they have a story ready which they think will suit a particular magazine, the editorial policy is changed.

The literary market can only be learnt through real practical experience and even it is difficult to understand. So far as is possible, the Editor of the Literary Year Book will be pleased to give any help in the selling of Mss. either in this country or America and whilst it will no doubt be impossible to answer all questions promptly enquirers will receive as much help as possible. A stamped-addressed envelope should accompany all communications to the Editor, who will make every endeavour to satisfy correspondents.

To revert to the main theme, the correspondent who raised this query has gone to some trouble to give a clear exposition of his idea and this is a classification of papers proposed :—

Instead of classifying periodicals alphabetically, he suggests to list them by requirements, e.g.,—

Class (a) Sensational serials. Stories of plot, and particularly depending upon violent clashes, generally with a love interest threaded in, with the girl of course hotly desired by the villian, and the reader well harrowed.

Class (b) Crime and mystery stories, deliberately set out to propound a real mystery, and depending on the mystery throughout.

Class (c) Love stories, with no violence, though with many misunderstandings, and harrowing of the feelings of the hero, heroine, and reader. Plenty of incident may be introduced, but nothing violent.

Class (d) The novel, without any deliberate curtaining. (Though, of course, the first instalment has usually to be arresting.)

Class (e) The Girls' school, or factory story. The heroine is a "terror," up to every prank, but always against snobs and bullies.

Class (f) Boys serials.

Class (g) Serials of factory and mill life, compact of accidents, jealousies, cruelties, and exaggerations of all sorts. Still, they have to be sincere of their kind. The whole theme is to dignify and glorify the working girl, and to contrast her favourably with Lady Vere de Vere. It is the old melodrama.

Class (h) The novel with a name (such as Hall Cain, etc.).

Class (i) "Domestic" serial in low class. Husband goes out with girl friend, etc.

Class (j) Flapper story. Love in an office. Ugly duckling type, etc., etc.

SERIAL STORIES.

The periodicals given below use serials of the following kinds as indicated by the letter appended. In some cases several kinds of serials are indicated in order of importance.

(a) Sensational. Plenty of plot, movement, incident; must be true to life, though perhaps a little breathless. A love interest is essential, and the story must keep to one or other of the principal characters.

(b) Crime and mystery. The essential feature is a really puzzling situation at the end of the first instalment.

(c) Etc., etc., as in the list already given.

SHORT STORIES.

The short story market is more on a level. The Dundee firms will accept a really artistic story (3,500) words provided it has a plot. (Reference is made to Thomsons and Lengs.) Both also specialise in stories of 7,500 words, sensational "long complete."

NEWS AGENCIES.

Tillottsons would consider serials, a., b., c., and short stories of 3,500 words.

Northern News Syndicate, serials a., b., c.

National Press Agency, serials, a., b., c., and short stories of 3,000 words.

Cassell's Press. Serials, a., b., c.

LONG COMPLETE PERIODICALS.

Horners Stories, 15,000, Sunday Stories 15,000, Twilight Novels 20,000, Forget-me-not Novels 25,000, Christian Novels 25,000, Answers Library 25,000, Girls Mirror about 20,000, Pollys Paper 12,000, Pegs Paper 12,000.

There are cheap novels to which serials may be sold and novels to such papers as Weekly Telegraph, Lloyds, etc.

The lengths of long complete stories have been changing for some time, and they are not steady yet.

There is a good deal to commend itself in this Correspondent's suggestion, though he overlooks the fact that the individual requirements of each author may vary. It is possible for ten authors to make ten different classifications, which would not suit the eleventh writer.

In order to enable the Editor to arrive at some form which will be useful to all users of the Book will writers please send in their views to him.

ILLUSTRATIONS.

The larger number of periodicals is illustrated at the present day, but most of these are commissioned—i.e., they are illustrations drawn to order for stories or matter already written. Some, however, take outside drawings and photography. Papers and magazines taking illustrations on special subjects will be found under those subjects. Periodicals taking humorous drawings will be found under "Miscellaneous" and a few magazines occasionally take cover illustrations. Most of the full-page illustrations in the weekly illustrated periodicals are drawn by the art staff.

THE TERCENTENARY OF BRITISH NEWSPAPERS.

This important anniversary in British journalism occurred on December 2nd, 1920, and to mark this event the Times has published through Messrs. Hodder and Stoughton at £1 1s. od. nett a "Handbook of English and Welsh Newspapers, 1620-1920." Not only newspapers but magazines and reviews are fully treated, and that it is a complete catalogue can be gauged from the fact that a leading authority has been engaged in it for 12 years.

"Two distinct objects have been kept in view" says the Daily Telegraph of Dec. 3rd., 1920 in mentioning this work. "The first is to provide research workers with a chronological record of all English newspapers, magazines, and reviews. Conjectures are avoided, and references are made solely to periodicals which may actually still be seen. For this purpose all the catalogues belonging to the British Museum and several other libraries have been collectively digested, and as far as possible, the dates and numbers of the earliest and latest known copies are stated under each title.

The second object is to give a complete catalogue of all periodicals still existing, either under the year of their origin or the date or earliest known copy.

The list which has been extended to the expiration of the recent war, is prefaced by a valuable, accurate historical introduction, giving an authoritative account of the origin of English newspapers and their first printers. The book is divided into two sections—Metropolitan and Provincial, to each of which there is appended a full index of titles, together with an historical introduction."

So far as Great Britain is concerned, we learn that Peter van den Keere printed half-sheet-in-folio, in English, containing reports about the battle of "Weissenberg," and thus the first English newspaper came into being. Though the battle was fought Nov. 8th, it was not till Dec. 2nd, 1620, that the document which, in all probability, was the first English newspaper was printed. Thomas Archer of Pope's Head-alley, Cornhill, Nicholas Bourne, and Nathaniel Butter are other names mentioned in connection with our earliest newspapers, and the last two became sole purveyors of news up to the time of the Great Rebellion. Only foreign news was printed down to 1641, for the corantos dealt almost exclusively with the Thirty Years' War. On July 11th, 1637, the Star Chamber issued its final decree on printing, by which the printer and author were to set their names to every book. The last rule ordered a copy of every book to be reserved for the Bodleian Library at Oxford.

NEWSPAPERS

Newspapers, a list of which follows, in general are open to accept articles only of certain kinds. Many are commissioned but occasionally outside contributions are accepted. The more popular papers accept the greater number of outside articles. Reviews and leaders in newspapers and literary papers are generally commissioned by editors from special writers.

The attention of contributors to daily newspapers is drawn to the following arrangement which has been made between the Newspaper Proprietors' Association and the National Union of Journalists regarding remuneration for linage and the rendering of accounts. The Clause of the Agreement dealing with this matter is as follows:—"For the purpose of making it clear to correspondents what allowances have been made in respect of matter submitted and claims for telegraphing, telephoning, etc., correspondents shall supply by the third day of each month detailed statements in duplicate of matter submitted, with details of their outlay on telegrams, telephone calls, railway and other carriage. One copy of such statement shall be duly checked and returned to the correspondent with his remittance."

CANADIAN PERIODICAL PUBLICATIONS

NOTE.—There has been an interesting increase in the number of periodicals published in Canada during the past few years but their contents are made up chiefly of articles on Canadian subjects. They are however open to consider really good matters of general application from authors on this side. A preliminary letter is necessary and desirable in every case. Very courteous treatment is given to contributors by Canadian publishers.

An asterisk (*) implies illustration.

- Canada Monthly (1906), M. 382 Clarence Street, London, Ontario.
Publishes fiction and illustrated articles, which deal preferably with Western Canadian subjects. Payment by arrangement. Fiction must be either Canadian or English in location and local colour.
- Canadian Courier (1906), W. 181 Simcoe Street, Toronto.
Uses illustrated articles of a news character, for which $\frac{1}{2}$ cent a word is paid on publication; also fiction with Canadian setting, and humorous material ("Demi-tasse" column), dealing chiefly with Canadians.
- Canadian Home Journal, M. Graphic Arts Building Toronto.
Uses short stories, verse, and illustrated articles dealing with woman's interests everywhere, but prefers Canadian specials. Payment by special arrangement.
- Canadian Magazine (1892). 206 Adelaide Street, West, Toronto.
Contains fiction and illustrated articles of a general character, though Canadian subjects are preferred. Payment is made by arrangement on publication. British contributors are advised to send preliminary note.
- Everywoman's World, M. Continental Publishing Co., 62 Temperance Street, Toronto.
An illustrated magazine for women, containing short stories, and articles of special interest to Canadian women.
- Farmers' Magazine (1911), M. 143-147 University Avenue, Toronto.
Uses articles on agricultural subjects, which must be prepared in a light and readable form. Sociological and educational subjects, as affecting the rural population, are also considered.
- MacLean's Magazine (1905), M. 143-147, University Avenue, Toronto.
Uses special articles dealing exclusively with Canadian or British subject and short stories of general interest. It also devotes a section to reproducing in condensed form leading articles from other magazines. Remuneration averages half a cent per word, and payment is made within a month of acceptance. Illustrations are always desired.
- Rod and Gun in Canada (1899), M., 15 cents (7 $\frac{1}{2}$). Woodstock, Ontario.
Articles dealing with hunting, fishing, camping, canoeing, and mountaineering in Canada are required. Each article is considered on its own merits.
- Saturday Night, W. Graphic Arts Building, Toronto.
A popular weekly, using general and topical articles (up to 2,000 words), preferably concerning Canadian life and aspects; short and long fiction of varied characteristics; anecdotes of Canadian public men. Payment follows publication.
- University Magazine (1901), Q. 216 Peel Street, Montreal. (Published by Macmillan Co. of Canada, Toronto.)
The leading literary periodical in Canada, modelled on the lines of the great English quarterlies. Publisher articles on public affairs, literature, science, art, philosophy, and religion. Payment by arrangement.
- Westminster (1902), M. Confederation Life Building, Toronto.
Any contributions of general literary nature are considered. Rate of payment depends on the merit of the article and the standing of the author. Payment is made on publication, from 10s. upwards per 1,000 words.

Western Home Monthly (1899), M. Home Publishing Company, McDermot and Arthur Streets, Winnipeg.

A home magazine for Canadian men and women, which buys short stories and special articles up to 4,000 words; and also those of not more than 500 to 1,500 words for young people. Canadian settings are preferred, though not essential. Payment is usually 10s. a thousand words, after publication.

THE AMERICAN LITERARY MARKET

The following List of American Periodicals should repay careful study by any writer. Strange as it may seem the American Editor treats a contributor more courteously than his British Confrere and further the remuneration is, on the whole, somewhat better than in this country. There is a qualification to this statement however and this is providing the Contributor supplies the matter required, provides the very best work and is absolutely au fait with his subject. For example the American trade papers, if they accept matter from this side, require the very best and latest obtainable, but they are willing to pay for it, so a writer will take pains to secure it. Remuneration is on a higher level in the United States than in Great Britain and the Colonies and with their larger advertisement revenue the American publications can afford to pay well. They are exacting in their requirements, but if you can fulfill those any writer will be well treated.

The American editor will always spend ten minutes of his time dictating to an enquirer from this side what he really wants and he will give his requirements specifically rather than generally and he will nearly always send two or three specimens of his paper, even if not asked to do so. A statement should always be made in a preliminary letter to an American editor as regards the usual remuneration a writer will accept, otherwise the ordinary space rates will be paid. In the majority of periodicals remittances follow very promptly the acceptance or use of matter and no accounts from the contributor are necessary.

After the passing of the preliminary letter between contributor and editor the Mss. sent for consideration should always be accompanied by a covering letter in the same envelope.

Care should be exercised in the sale of the author's copyright in America and if readers have not already done so the section in this volume on "Literary Property" should be perused carefully.

Although Mss. can be sent to America by the "Commercial Papers" Post it is recommended that ordinary postage be employed with the usual International Reply coupon.

The American Editor is very sympathetic to suggestions from contributors and where an expert has something interesting to tell or some new methods of procedure as regards technical practice to relate there is always a good chance of the suggestion being accepted and an article or a series of articles commissioned.

The Editor of the Literary Year Book will be pleased to give any help to intending contributors to the American Market.

A "BOOK WEEK" FOR BRITISH PUBLISHERS

BY GRANT RICHARDS.

The Editor of The Literary Year Book has asked me to write a short article embodying my views about a Book Week for England. I don't think I set any particular value on a Book Week, but here roughly is my idea :—

I suggest that the English publishers should get together in the same way that the American publishers have done, and see whether they cannot, with the assistance of the booksellers, build up a large fund for the advertising to the general public of the fact that there are such things as books. When I say "a large fund" I mean a fund that would bear some reasonable relation to the 100,000 dollars which I understand the American publishers and booksellers are putting up in that country. That fund was, I gather, raised by a percentage levy on turnover: publishers were to pay such a percentage, wholesalers another, and booksellers another. I even took the liberty of suggesting that the Publishers' Association here, which must have accumulated funds, should dedicate some part of these funds to this purpose. I suggest that then, under the guidance of the best advertising specialists, this money should be laid out in newspaper advertising of Books. Whole pages should be taken in such London papers as the "Daily Mail," the "Daily Express" the "Daily News" and the "Daily Chronicle" and in the more popular papers in the Provinces. Oh, yes! I know that this would be costly, but I am convinced in my own mind, although the "Publisher's Circular" does not agree with me, that the game would be worth the candle. In such advertisements no publisher's name should be given and the name of no book should be given. They would aim at ramming home into the consciousness of people who at present do not buy Books, who hardly realise that there are bookshops, that Books are the cheapest form of enjoyment; that there are Books for every taste; that most Books can be read again and again; that they make a very happy and permanent form of present—that they are much better than vanity bags, or inferior pipes, or boxes of bad cigars, or be ribboned baskets of chocolates. People should be told that Books are a decoration, that they are furniture. And they should be told all the other good things about Books: that there is fun in them and excitement. They should be shown with argument that 10/- goes very much further in a bookseller's shop than it does in a confectioner's or a tobacconist's or in the shops where those stupid fancy leather and silver things are sold which are generally a nuisance to the people to whom they are given. Imagine what such a man as Joseph Thorp or Thomas Russell could make of this there. Remember too that every convert to Books is a man who will go on buying Books to the end of his life. The truth is that we do not in this country sell anything like the number of Books that we might sell. One of the American writers who has been co-operating in the American campaign puts the case in a nutshell : we have been content, he says, to pick up the ripe fruit that has fallen from the tree ; we propose now to shake the tree.

In addition to newspaper advertising other efforts can be made. For instance, in America they have sent out a caravan—" a book-store on wheels "—and the active work of this caravan is to be used by four motion picture companies as material for films, which will be shown at all the motion picture theatres throughout the country.

Mind, these are only suggestions. Others might be made. I do not tie myself down to any one scheme. The great thing is " to get a move on."

GRANT RICHARDS.

SCHOLARSHIPS FOR WORKS OF LITERARY MERIT

Bequests to literary, publishing and book trade institutions have been made by the late Mr. William Heinemann. The sum of £500 is left to the Publishers' Association of Great Britain and Ireland as a reserve fund to meet any emergency where the interests of British publishers may be threatened. Mr. Heinemann was the moving spirit in the foundation of the Publishers' Association and was president from 1909 to 1911. A bequest of £500 is made to the National Book Trade Provident Society of which he was president from 1913 to 1919.

Subject to a life interest of his mother and two sisters, half of his residuary estate is left as a gift to the Royal Society of Literature for the establishment of a foundation or scholarship fund to be called " The Heinemann Foundation for Literature." The purpose of this foundation is to help in the production of literary work of real value. Works in any branch of literature may be submitted for the verdict of the Royal Society of Literature, and their verdict shall be final and without appeal. Works of fiction shall not be excluded from the competitions, but the judges are requested to bear in mind that the testator's intention is primarily to reward those classes of literature which are least remunerative—poetry, criticism, biography, history.

Mr. Heinemann leaves an interesting collection of autographs, private papers, and biographical sketches, also the manuscript of his unpublished reminiscences to his partner, Mr. Sydney S. Pawling, leaving the decision as to choice and time of publication to his judgment. In all bequests under his will, Sir George Lewis is to be consulted on any question of importance which may arise, whether of a professional or private nature.

BRITISH PUBLISHERS

NOTE.—It is advisable to write to publishers before submitting MSS., in case of change of address, or other changes. This step will minimize the risk of loss of MSS. through non-delivery for any cause. MSS. should always be registered so as to prove, if necessary later, receipt in a publishers office.

A CLASSIFIED LIST OF PUBLISHERS' REQUIREMENTS

NOTE.—For certain classes of books an author will more readily obtain attention for his MS. if he applies to those publishers who more particularly deal with his subject. Many publishers, indeed take all subjects for their province (e.g., Messrs. Macmillan, Methuen, Longmans, etc.), but even these devote more attention to definite classes of books, and the following list attempts to indicate those firms who should be first approached for the publication of a work falling under any of the following heads.

ROYALTIES

AUTHORS will find the following tables useful whenever they adopt the method of payment by results known as royalties. It is somewhat difficult at times in publishers' accounts to ascertain the exact sum due to the author when x copies of his book have been sold at the price of y shillings, on which a royalty of z per cent. is due to the author. The following tables are intended to facilitate this calculation by reducing the somewhat laborious test of complicated multiplication to a simple process of addition. The matter is further complicated by the general practice of publishers accounting to authors for sales on the basis of 13 as 12 (or sometimes 25 as 24), which they generally grant to the retail booksellers. There are accordingly two sets of tables, one in order to reduce 13 to 12 (or 13 to $12\frac{1}{2}$), and the remainder to ascertain the exact amount due on different systems of royalty and on price books.

Thus, if 936 of a 5s. book have been sold on which a royalty of 10 per cent, is due, the first table will enable the calculator to ascertain that 936 could only be reckoned as 864, and from the fourth column of the table devoted to 5s. the royalties for 800, for 60, and for 4 are already given, and the final result easily works out at £21 12s. Generally speaking, it is sufficient to check the results roughly—e.g., by finding out how much 850 copies would bring in.

In making the following calculations a certain difficulty arises owing to the deficiency of our coinage, which reckons nothing lower than a farthing, and to the trade custom of the booksellers by which the moiety is the only fractional part of the price of a book recognised. In consequence some of the results are not strictly in accordance with the Rule of Three.

The suggestion has been made that it is not entirely reasonable to define these royalties within the limits of $2\frac{1}{2}$ and 20 per cent. ; but the royalty of $2\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. is in frequent use, especially where colonial editions of books published in England are concerned, and as has been shown, in graduated royalties. Royalties of more than 20 per cent., on the other hand, are not frequent : and as these tables are intended to afford assistance to the majority of authors—to take, in fact, the place of a working guide—it would be misleading to include figures which are only applicable to exceptional cases.

REAMS OF PAPER.

A REAM of writing or handmade paper usually consists of twenty quires of twenty-four sheets each, 480 in all ; but machine-made paper is generally made up to 516 sheets (twenty-one and a half quires), termed " printers' reams," As long numbers are mostly printed on these papers, each ream thus gives something more than 500 perfect copies, and allows for waste and spoilage.

Books are defined respectively as folio (20), quarto (4to), octavo (8vo), duodecimo (12mo), sextodecimo (16mo), octodecimo (18mo), vigesimo-quarto (24mo), trigesimo-secundo (32mo), etc. These definitions are arrived at by the number of times a sheet is folded ; for instance, a folio would be two leaves to the sheet, a quarto four leaves, and so on. Sometimes it is difficult to distinguish, say, an octavo from a quarto ; but if it is printed on a laid paper, the water-lines that run at intervals through the sheet (not to be confused with the smaller and closer wire marks of the sheet) will determine this. The water-lines on a folio, octavo, and octodecimo would be perpendicular; on a quarto, duodecimo, and sextodecimo, horizontal. The signatures or letters placed at the foot of the first, and sometimes the third page, also serve as a guide to identification. [These terms are rarely used now].

TYPOGRAPHICAL TERMS

- Advance sheets or copies.* Printed in advance for simultaneous publication elsewhere, or for preliminary notices.
- Ampersand.* The abbreviation or sign for the word " and " : thus, & (roman), & (italic), & (black-letter).
- Antiqua.* A German expression for Roman types.
- Bastard title.* The fly- or half-title before the full title of the work.
- Black-letter.* A general expression used to indicate old English text or church type.
- Block.* A general term used as embracing woodcut, electro, or zinco.
- Body of the work.* The text or subject-matter is thus described to distinguish it from the preliminary, appendix, or notes.
- Broadside.* A sheet printed on one side only.
- Calendered paper.* Paper very highly rolled or glazed, much used for printing illustrated books or magazines.
- Cast off.* To calculate or estimate length of copy to be printed—a troublesome task in uneven or badly-written MS.
- Clarendon.* A bold or fat-faced type is generally thus described. The older founts were called " Egyptian."
- Clerical errors.* Mistakes in copying MS.
- Cliche.* French term for a cast, usually applied to stereo or electro duplicates.

Collate. To run through the sheets of a book to see if the signatures are in sequence.

Colophon. An inscription or tailpiece, usually a printer's imprint, at the end of a book.

Cut-edges. A book which has been cut on the three sides is said to have cut edges.

Cut-in notes. Side-notes which are inserted within the text at the side instead of in the margin.

Deckle. The raw rough edge of hand-made paper is thus termed.

Dummy copy. A copy generally made up of blank leaves to represent the actual bulk of a work not quite complete.

End leaves or papers. The blank fly-leaves at either end of the book.

Fly-title. The half-title in front of the general title, or which divides sections of a work.

Folio. A sheet of paper folded in two leaves only.

Fore-edge. The outer side of a book (distinct from the head or tail) when folded.

Format. The bibliographical term for size and shape of a book.

Fount. This term is applied to the whole number of letters constituting a complete set of types of any particular class of face or body.

Fraktur. A German expression for their text or black-letter characters.

Half-bound. Books partly bound in leather, with cloth or paper sides.

Half-title. The sub-title in front of the full title.

Heads. A term applied to the margins at the tops of the pages.

Indent. To set a line some little distance back, as in the case of a fresh paragraph.

Inferior figures and letters. Made to range at the bottom of letters, thus: 123æio

Leaded matter. Types with leads between the lines, in contradistinction to "solid" matter.

Letterpress. Printed matter from type, as distinct from lithographic or plate printing.

Lower-case letters. The small letters as used here, a, b, c, d, etc.

Moulds. Generally understood as the preliminary stage in stereotyping by paper process.

Octavo. A sheet of paper folded into eight, shortly written thus: 8vo.

Off-set. The set-off of ink from one sheet to another, the result of insufficient drying or bad ink.

Preliminary. Any matter coming before the text of a work: title, preface, contents, etc.

Proof. A trial print of any forme of type, plates, or blocks.

Pulls. A term generally applied to proofs.

Quarto. A sheet folded into four leaves; shortly: 4to.

Quire. Twenty-four sheets. Books in sheets, that is, not bound, are said to be in quires.

Quotes. A printer's term for turned commas (") and apostrophes ('), placed respectively at the beginning and end of quoted matter.

Ream. Twenty quires. A printer's ream is 516 sheets; handmade and drawing papers sometimes 472, 480, or 500 sheets.

Recto. The right-hand pages of any work.

Rubricated. Printed in red ink.

Serif. The fine line in the top and bottom of a letter, as in H. Sanserif thus: H.

Set-off. Where the ink sets off from one sheet to another.

Shoulder notes. Marginal notes placed at the top corner of the page.

Signature. The letter or figure at the foot of the first page of a sheet to guide the binder in folding; also used by printers to identify any particular sheet.

Size copy. A thickness or dummy copy [q v.].

Slips. Applied to matter not made up into pages, but pulled as proofs in long slips.

Small capitals. The smaller capitals (as distinct from the full capitals) thus: STANDING. Indicated in MS. by two strokes (=) underneath.

Standing. Type not distributed after printing is said to be "standing."

Stereotypes. Casts of pages of type, etc., in metal, either by "plaster" or "paper" process.

Superior letters and figures. Small letters cast at the top of the shoulder of type, used for references or abbreviations, thus: ¹²³ Mr No

Swash letters. Seventeenth-century italic capitals, with tails and flourishes

Tails. The bottoms or tail ends of pages.

Turned commas. Used at the beginning of quoted matter, thus, "—and followed at the end by ". Sometimes called "inverted commas."

Typography. The art or style of printing from movable letters.

Uncut edges. Books not cut down, but not necessarily "unopened."

Unopened edges. Applied to books the edges of which have not been opened.

Verso. The obverse or back of a leaf, the reverse of "recto" [q.v.].

Wrong fount. Letters of a different character or series mixed with another fount.

[From Some Notes on Books and Printing, by C. T. JACOBI.]

TECHNICAL TERMS FOR PROCESS BLOCKS

Processes * or engraved plates which must be printed separately.

- Aquatint.* Etching on copper or steel through grounds of finely-powdered resinous substances.
- Autogravure.* A copper-plate photo-etched from a bichromated gelatine basis.
- Autotype.* Prints re-produced by means of certain bichromated gelatine processes (carbon or collotype).
- Chromograph.* A reproduction of a coloured original by litho, photo-litho, or photo-etched blocks.
- Collotype.* A photo reproduction printed in ink from a surface of sensitized and exposed gelatine.
- Cuts.* Any impression from a type block.
- Electrotype.* A copper-faced facsimile of a block or plate produced from a wax mould in a depositing battery.
- Etching.* An impression from a copper or steel plate, the lines of which have been drawn by hand and etched with or without an acid.
- Ferro-print.* Ferro-gallic and ferro-prussiate. Prints made from salts of iron sensitizers, principally used for plans and copying tracings in blue or black lines.
- Glyptotype.* A print produced by the Woodbury-type process transferred to plate paper.
- Half-tint blocks.* See Tint blocks.
- Half-tone blocks.* See Tint blocks.
- Heliotype.* A process of collotype printing.
- India proofs.* An impression on China, Japan, or India paper, from an engraved plate.
- Intaglio, sunk or hollowed.* An etched plate having sunk lines or picture.
- Lichtdruck.* Collotype.
- Line process.* Usually applied to any photo process for producing type blocks in relief.
- Lithography.* Printing from stone with ink specially prepared.
- Lithotint.* An etching executed on stone.
- Mezzotint, mixed* (as in Turner's Liber Studiorum). The subject first etched on steel or copper to secure the forms, then rocked over as in pure mezzotint, and the subject "scraped out."

Mezzotint, pure.* The plate, steel or copper, first roughened by a rocking-tool till the surface partakes more or less of the nature of a very fine file ; then the subject " scraped out " to the various degrees of light and shade required, and burnished where very high lights are wanted.

Monotint. Tint printing in a single colour.

Nickelface. The coating of an engraved plate or block with a battery-deposited surface of nickel.

Photocrome.* A process of reproducing photographs in colours.

Photogravure.* A photo-engraved plate in lines or tones for copper-plate printing, or impressions therefrom.

Photo-lithography.* The process of printing from stone by means of a photographic transfer.

Process blocks. Blocks produced by a photo-etching process.

Process work. Work produced by a photo-etching process.

Relief printing. (a) Printing from type-blocks, (b) printing letters or designs in relieve.

Remarque proofs. Original impressions from steel or copper engraved plates, and which usually have a device on the margin instead of a title.

Silverprints.* Usually defines a chloride of silver print—an ordinary photograph.

Stereotypes. Casts in stereotype metal (lead and zinc) from type or type-blocks.

Three-colour blocks.* Blocks chemically produced from nature or pictures in colours by means of a photo process, and which render all the colours of the original.

Tint blocks. Type blocks of wash drawings or photographs produced by means of ruled dots or tints.

Vignettes. Usually applied to illustrations which are shaded or softened off at the edges.

Woodbury Prints.* Prints which closely resemble ordinary photographs, produced by a process invented by Mr. W. B. Woodbury.

Woodcuts. Wood blocks or impressions from the same.

Xylography. Generally applied to the printing of old block-books.

ARE SECOND-HAND BOOKSELLERS LITERARY GUIDES ?

Are second-hand booksellers great readers ? This question arose in a club the other day. "Not necessarily," said one clubman. "Your fishmonger is not always eating fish, and I once knew a butcher who was a vegetarian. I have talked with many second-hand booksellers who were exceedingly well-read men, but as a class I think they are like Autolycus—snappers-up of unconsidered trifles. I recall one who indexed thus " Mill, on Liberty ; Ditto, on the Floss," and it is said that asked for ' Wild Wales ' a stallman regretted he had not that book, but proffered Jack London's ' Tales of the Fish Patrol ' instead."

A good bookseller must be a man of wide reading, though he has no time to be deeply read. He needs must know a little of everything, and so has small chance of knowing much of any one thing. Like Debrett, he must be well up in titles, he must have a good memory, and he must watch the public fancy of the passing hour. A secondhand man I once knew displayed this motto : " It is never too late to turn over an old leaf. It is not binding to buy, though I have only bindings to sell."

"For my part" said a veteran, since you raise the subject, I have always found second-hand booksellers living tomes of book lore. I remember as a Liverpool Institute boy, in the days of John Stepten, having long talks with a certain cast-off book merchant near Mount Street. He introduced me to Marryat and Ballantyne and Dumas by snapshots of the plots, which effectually led me away from the penny dreadfuls of the period. With many boys his rough-and-tumble library was as popular as the tuck-shop near the school corner. "In these days the choice of books that boys read was left to their own unguided or misguided fancy. Home lessons were in great vogue, but it never occurred to any teacher to set the boys a certain novel to read, and then get them to write an essay and answer questions on it afterwards. Home lessons were fearsome and dreary tasks ; one like this would have been a delight. I hope our modern school methods are different. But are they ? "

LIBRARIES

NOTE.—A selection of the more important libraries only, giving the special collections to be found in them.

ABERYSTWYTH. National Library of Wales.—The Library, founded by Royal Charter dated 1907, began its career in a temporary building January 1, 1909.

THE COLLECTIONS.—The Library is both general and special. Every effort is being made to make the collection relating to Wales and the Celtic peoples and languages as complete as possible. To this end, every work, pamphlet, or printed document published in or concerning Wales is acquired as published, and in the case of older works as opportunity offers. The feature of the library is the collection of Welsh MSS., which is the finest in the world, and is mainly due to the munificence of Sir John Williams. It includes a number of unique works of great importance. By the Copyright Act of 1911, the Library was added to the libraries entitled to claim a copy of all books published in Great Britain (see under "Copyright and the Libraries"). The number of printed books in the library is over 150,000; of MSS., about 5,000. There is also a large collection of Maps and Topographical prints and drawings.

The library authorities are prepared to undertake responsibility for MSS., etc., temporarily deposited for the use of students.

Rooms.—Besides the Reading Room and the Newspaper Room (which, in addition to newspapers, contains the London Gazette, Journals of the House of Commons, and other Parliamentary papers), other Students' Rooms are the MSS. Students' Room, the Oriental Students' Room, and the Print Room.

REFERENCE SHELVES.—In addition to the bulk of the collection, which is only available as indicated in the foregoing remarks, there are on the shelves on the ground floor of the Reading Room itself some thousands of reference volumes, ranging through history, geography and travel, and every science, down to such works of reference as encyclopædias, lexicons, directories and the like. These the reader is permitted to take down for himself, but must replace on the proper shelf when he has finished using them. With regard to the encyclopædias, dictionaries etc., these must be returned to the shelves as soon as done with, and in some cases must be consulted at the shelf. In Continental libraries readers are not permitted to carry off to their own desks reference works of this description.

CATALOGUES.—The AUTHOR Catalogue, stretching in double row around the central desk, is now, in its printed form, condensed to 1,200 volumes. In the way of CLASS Catalogues, which for the most part exist in the unrealized dreams of successive generations of libraries, we have Fortescue's exceedingly useful SUBJECT INDEX, and Poole's likewise valuable INDEX TO PERIODICALS. A new edition of Fortescue's SUBJECT INDEX, 1881-1900, has been printed, as also additional volumes for the years 1901-1905, 1906-1910; and there is a current subject index 1911 and onwards. These aids to reference are, with their respective supplements, to be found next the central desk. There are, in addition to these, special catalogues of manuscripts, music and maps, and useful bibliographies on every subject are to be found in the cases at the end of the readers' desks.

The READING ROOM is open on week-days (except the first four week-days of March and September, Good Friday, Christmas Day, and days appointed by authority), from 9 a.m. to 7 p.m., throughout the year.

The NEWSPAPER ROOM, which is under the same regulations as the Reading Room, is open from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. The Room is closed on Sundays, Good Friday, Christmas Day, and the first four week-days of March and September.

The STUDENTS' ROOM, DEPARTMENT OF MSS., is open from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., it being required that all MSS. be given up at 4.45 p.m. This Room (as well as the Oriental Students' Room) is closed at certain times, as in the case of the Reading and Newspaper Rooms.

The PRINT ROOM and the ORIENTAL STUDENTS' ROOM are open from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

With regard to the right of the British Museum to receive copies of all books published in the United Kingdom, see under COPYRIGHT AND THE LIBRARIES.

HOW THE FREE LIBRARY COULD BE IMPROVED

BY R. A. SCOTT-JAMES in the Daily Chronicle

It must be very stimulating to busy professional men to meet together from time to time in conference, and exhort one another with words of hope, extracting from atmosphere of oratory the feeling that their routine is part of a crusade. I have seen head masters renew their half-forgotten ideals of education in the glow of a peroration; and in reading the speeches at the conference of the Library Association I found librarians building a new England, informed and enlightened under the gentle influence of the free libraries.

And my thoughts went back to the public libraries that I know and have known—to the much-frequented newspaper-room, to the reference department or students' room, so little used, to the lending department, whence hundreds of young women extract books which encourage the ideals acquired in the cinema hall.

I do not ignore the fact that there are some very well equipped libraries, some extremely competent librarians, and some very ardent readers, especially in working-class centres. But a few admirable examples cannot save these institutions as a whole from criticism. There are libraries in every considerable town in England, generously housed; more are about to be established in country districts; and large sums of public money or trust money are spent every year.

Lavish provision has in fact been made, but are we getting adequate results? Many of the librarians themselves admit that we are not. No severer criticism could be made than that of Mr. Frank Pacy, chief librarian in Westminster. I would ask almost any reader anywhere: To what extent is the public library in your neighbourhood thought of and spoken of as an institution which your neighbourhood thought of and spoken of as an institution which your neighbourhood is proud of? If it is not so thought of and spoken of, it is not fulfilling its proper function. Of course it is one thing to provide an excellent library, and another thing to make the public use it. The librarian cannot go out among the byways and hedges and compel readers to come in. His first, his main business, is to organise and equip his library; and if he has done that part of the job well, it is the business of public men, educationists, teachers, social workers, preachers, to exhort their followers to use their opportunities.

THE CHOICE OF BOOKS.

It is not just books that are wanted. There are books in crowds, books tumbling over one another, and the very trouble of the book world is that it is so big, so confusingly overstocked. literature tends to defeat its own object by its sheer multiplicity, and we cannot get far with it till we have removed encumbrances, and made clearances, so that we are not prevented from seeing the wood for the trees. What the libraries need are not more books, but the right books, and it is the business of every librarian and every committee to make up his mind what the library is to be. There are, I suppose, a "thousand best books," or more probably two or three thousand—a minimum of standard literature which no library should be without. Such a list should be available for every centre. That minimum is, or should be, easily determined, and after that the real element of selection comes in.

We want the right books for students—history, science, philosophy, sociology, &c.—and equally we need the right imaginative literature, including contemporary works—poetry, fiction, belles lettres in general. Those who buy books for libraries should be constantly in touch with informed opinion. They will not seek advice from poets, if they are buying students' books, but from students; if they are looking for the best modern fiction or poetry they will not go to the don or the schoolmaster, or even the lecturer on literary history, but to the men who are keenly alive to modern literary movements and impulses.

I am sure that if the Library Association wished it they could readily find a committee of such men—divided, I would suggest, into two sub-committees—who would gladly and voluntarily work for them and with them. The first of these sub-committees might consist of eminent specialists, mainly in the academic world, who would make recommendations in regard to historical, scientific, and in general didactic literature.

The second would be a sub-committee of literary men, including some young men, whose chief function it would be to issue short descriptive lists of the few new imaginative works which deserve to be read. It would be folly to ignore the fact that contemporary fiction constitutes the mass of the reading of the modern public; that the kind of fiction read is having an incalculable effect upon the mind of the nation; and that unfortunately it is the most trivial kind which finds its way into the hands of the majority of readers.

Here is a rare opportunity for the libraries, when they have come into their own, when each has created about itself an atmosphere. By just selection, by a little tack in giving prominence to new purchases they can provide the facilities for the forming and asserting of taste.

JOURNALISTS AND COPYRIGHT

The Newspaper World of December 11th, 1920 says :—

" Frequently, when the receipt giving the copyright to papers is on the back of the cheque, young writers are afraid that, if they do not sign the receipt, the cheque will not be paid by the bank. Talking to a banker the other day, I was informed that this was not the case. The cheque can be countersigned above the receipt or the latter can be crossed out."

THE TRAINING OF YOUTH.

THE QUESTION OF A SCHOOL.

THE question of a boy's education must always entail most serious consideration on the part of a parent. The latter knows full well how necessary it is to be well equipped for the battle of life, how important it is in a world of keen competition—to-day keener than ever before—that every preparation should be made and no pains spared to enable a young fellow to make his way, and to be a credit to all—himself, his parent, and his fellow citizens. So much depends on this preparation, this training of a lad to take his place successfully in the world of affairs. All this is vividly present to the mind of every parent, or such as stand in responsible relation to a boy, when called upon to make the choice of a school. So much depends upon the school.

A BOY'S FUTURE.

A boy's future can be made or marred here. As Waterloo was won, as the saying goes, on the playing fields of Eton, so in the battle of life victory or defeat may depend largely on the training, effective or defective, with which the aspirant to success has been equipped. Unfortunately, a large proportion of schools are more showy than effectual; they build, but where the foundation should be solid it is weak, the structure flimsy, though perhaps mildly decorative. Many a County Council schoolboy is often far better equipped than the son of well-to-do parents, who have paid large fees for their boy's education. And it has not always been the boy's fault.

AN ALL-ROUND EDUCATION.

On what principle then, should the boy be trained? What system of education will provide the best guarantee of future success. Well, it may be laid down that the basis should be an all-round education and development both of mind and body. When this has been successfully achieved the rest is comparatively simple. But a thoroughly sound general education first and foremost should be a sine qua non. Specialisation should come later, at the period when a youth has settled in his mind his future ambitious, which is usually at the age of seventeen, eighteen, or nineteen, at the end of his school career. The primary aim of a school then should be to produce methodically the good all-round man, thoroughly alert and competent generally. Mens sana in corpore sano. On this sound and solid foundation of thorough general education the most splendid superstructure may be erected, but, failing this, it is more than doubtful but that the building will be vain, unequal to withstand the storm and stress of circumstance.

A SUCCESSFUL SCHOOL.

A school where the above principle has been applied with uniformity of success, forming and modelling callow youth into confident manhood, which has finally made itself respected in many walks of life, particularly in the North of England, deserves then to be brought to the attention of all who are occupied with the problem of a boy's education. At ELLESMERE COLLEGE, Shropshire, the parent will find a curriculum designed to the above ends. It bestows that good all-round education which is such a desideratum, and at moderate fees, too. It prepares boys for the Professions, Civil Service, for other competitive examinations, also for the Universities. It qualifies them for Agricultural, Engineering, and Commercial life; and it gives special attention to Commercial subjects. All boys are treated alike—no preference is given in coaching. The boy thus well grounded and solidly equipped is ripe for training in a Commercial or Technical College after he has left the school.

DIVERSITY OF INTERESTS.

Even the diversity of interests catered for by the adjuncts to the school: cadet corps, swimming, hockey, football, cricket, tennis, musical and Shakespearean society, etc., etc., has its main object in the product of a general high level of competence. Discipline is maintained, but without harshness, and a great point is an appeal to a boy's honourable instincts. The religious teaching is of the Church of England, greater attention being given to the sound and practical in Christian concepts than to ritual.

ELLESMERE COLLEGE.

The material, diet, too, is thoroughly adequate, being unlimited quantity and excellent in quality. The health of the boys is carefully watched, all arrangements are in the hands of the resident medical officer who has under his special supervision any boy whose health is unsatisfactory. There are sick wards under a professional nurse, and also a detached sanatorium for infectious complaints. ELLESMERE COLLEGE is healthily situated in picturesque country about a mile and a quarter from Ellesmere Station, and is readily accessible from all parts of England. The journey from London takes only 4½ hours.

. . THE . . LITERARY YEAR BOOK

Some Recent Press Opinions :

"In its new form it should prove of greater value than ever."
Scotsman.

"Under the present editorship 'The Literary Year Book' has steadily improved."—Evening Standard.

"Such a useful book is almost an absolute necessity in these days for the equipment of every writer and journalist, and is at the same time extremely interesting."

"Useful to everyone connected with the newspaper world in any capacity."

"The progressive improvement of the Year-Book is most marked."—Notts Guardian.

"It is scarcely necessary to say the book has been revised and made as accurate as possible."—Westminster Gazette.

"Indispensable, and being improved year by year."—Yorkshire Post.

"Fully maintains its unique place amongst the most useful of our works of reference."—Bookman.

"In every way a most handy and important work."—Englishman (Calcutta).

Opinions of Authors :

"Am a constant user of your Year-Book, and can personally testify to its usefulness."—W.J.H.

"I find it invaluable; it must mean a vast amount of work to compile it."—E.H.C.

"Best wishes for the continued success of your very useful book."—A.E.B.

"A very fine production, and shows great skill in arrangement; should certainly be in the hands of every public man and woman."—J.H.

"Your praiseworthy work deserves every encouragement."—F.G.B.

WHY YOU SHOULD . .

ADVERTISE IN THE . .

LITERARY YEAR BOOK.

THE LITERARY YEAR BOOK is not as might be supposed—a production outside the scope of the ordinary advertiser but a valuable advertising medium, as will be seen from the following statement.

Although its circulation is guaranteed at 5,000 copies, it has for 38 years past invariably exceeded that number, but it is not the amount of circulation which matters so much as the Quality.

It must be obvious to anyone searching for facts that a book which can be published and sold for the sum of 8/6 is one which appeals to and is purchased by those having “money to spend,” and it is that section of the community which every advertiser strives to reach.

THE LITERARY YEAR BOOK is admittedly the true “Authors Vade-Mecum,” and in addition is invaluable as a reference work to all those connected with the Literary profession in any form, to the professional and amateur writer it is indispensable and it can always be found in the libraries of the British Isles, Europe, The Colonies, and America.

Each New Edition is thoroughly revised and brought up-to-date, and contains about 600 pages, making a most attractive advertising proposition.

There are a few special positions to be obtained and instructions to reserve space should be sent early in the year to secure good positions.

Advertising rates will be sent on application to the Advertisement Manager:—
